Carry Me Home Diane McWhorter, 2001 Carry Me Home is a dramatic account of the civil rights era's climactic battle in Birmingham as the Movement led by Martin Luther King Jr brought down the institutions of segregation The Year of Birmingham 1963 was one of the most cataclysmic periods in America's long civil rights struggle That spring King's child demonstrators faced down Commissioner Bull Connor's police dogs and fire hoses in huge nonviolent marches for desegregation a spectacle that seemed to belong more in the Old Testament than in twentieth century America A few months later Ku Klux Klansmen retaliated with dynamite bombing the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church and killing four young black girls Yet these shocking events also brought redemption They transformed the halting civil rights movement into a national cause and inspired the Civil Rights Act of 1964 which abolished legal segregation once and for all Diane McWhorter the daughter of a prominent white Birmingham family captures the opposing sides in this struggle for racial justice Tracing the roots of the civil rights movement to the Old Left and its efforts to organize labor in the 1930s Carry Me Home shows that the Movement was a waning force in desperate need of a victory by the time King arrived in Birmingham McWhorter describes the competition for primary among the Movement's leaders especially between Fred Shuttlesworth Birmingham's flamboyant preacher activist and the already world famous King who was ambivalent about the direct action tactics Shuttlesworth had been practicing for years Carry Me Home is the product of years of research in FBI and police files and archives and of hundreds of interviews including conversations with Klansmen who belonged to the most violent klavern in America John and Robert Kennedy J Edgar Hoover George Wallace Connor King and Shuttlesworth appear against the backdrop of the unforgettable events of the civil rights era the brutal beating of the Freedom Riders as the police stood by King s great testament his Letter from Birmingham Jail and Wallace s defiant Stand in the Schoolhouse Door This book is a classic work about this transforming period in American history BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved

Against Principalities William D. Watley,1980 Selected Acquisitions Stanford Law Library,1975 ABC Pol Sci,1978 To See the Promised Land Frederick L. Downing,1986 This is a psychohistorical study of Martin Luther King making use of James Fowler s faith development theory and Erik Erikson s conception of the Homo Religiosus Downing argues that previous studies have placed an inordinate emphasis on the intellectual development of King s thought and have failed to give sufficient attention to his early childhood experiences Downing reveals the real rather than the mythic King and attempts to show a clear distinction between the early and the later King between the King calling for reconciliation and the King calling into question the whole structure of American society ISBN 0 86554 207 4 27 50
