Architectural Design and CAD Yvon Gardan,2012-12-06 In any business the essential element for the successful use of data processing is training This represents the largest expense both at start up and as CAD impacts design office procedures other than drafting Training is also the most difficult cost item to quantify Even more than the equip ment training or retraining in the case of professionals in practice is the key to increased productivity Recommendations for specific programs of training are beyond the scope of this paper Once staff has been retrained to work at higher levels of productivity with data processing equipment they are more valuable They will be more difficult to replace Their new capabilities represent a significant invest ment in modernization both to the individual design office and to the design profession as a whole There is a shortage of qualified people with both professional and computer skills Competition among employers for people with these skills already exists and will probably continue into the foreseeable future At the outset of training an employment agreement is worth considering for the well being of all parties

Architecture's New Media Yehuda E. Kalay,2004 A comprehensive examination of computer aided architectural design and its potential effect on architectural design practice for practitioners educators students and researchers Computer aided design CAD technology has already changed the practice of architecture and it has the potential to change it even more radically With Architecture s New Media Yehuda Kalay offers a comprehensive exposition of the principles methods and practices that underlie architectural computing He discusses the aspects of information technology that are pertinent to architectural design analyzes the benefits and drawbacks of particular computational methods and looks at the potential of emerging computational techniques to affect the future of architectural design CAD technology introduced in the postwar era and adopted in everyday architectural practice beginning in the 1970s is now so indispensable that as William Mitchell observes in his foreword architectural practice without it is as unimaginable as writing without a word processor Yet Kalay argues it has had little qualitative effect This book provides a detailed introduction for practitioners educators students and researchers to aspects of CAD that go beyond the improvements in drafting modeling and rendering for which it is commonly used Computer aided architectural design CAAD is capable of modeling and manipulating objects not merely their graphical representations reasoning about and predicting performance of design solutions generating new design solutions through algorithmic and other methods managing vast amounts of information and taking advantage of opportunities offered by the Internet for collaboration across time and space and for design of the virtual space of the Internet itself Architecture s New Media covers five main topics design methods and computer technology and the relationship between computers and design the principles of communication and representation generative design methods the advantages of computational methods for predicting and evaluating the performance of design solutions and current and future developments in technology including collaborative design intelligent design assistants construction automation and virtual design environments
