Sasek, John A. Glaser, P. Baveye, 2012-12-06 Traditional reliance on chemical analysis to understand the direction and extent of treatment in a bioremediation process has been found to be inadequate Whereas the goal of bioremediation is toxicity reduction few direct reliable measures of this process are as yet available Another area of intense discussion is the assessment of market forces contributing to the acceptability of bioremediation Finally another important component is a series of lectures and lively exchanges devoted to practical applications of different bioremediation technologies The range of subjects covers a wide spectrum encompassing emerging technologies as well as actual full scale operations Examples discussed include landfarming biopiling composting phytoremediation and mycoremediation Each technology is explored for its utility and capability to provide desired treatment goals Advantages and limitations of each technology are discussed The concept of natural attenuation is also critically evaluated since in some cases where time to remediation is not a significant factor it may be an alternative to active bioremediation operations Technical Translations ,1963 Annals of applications such as expert systems and intelligent tutoring systems and has interacted closely with psychological research However it is generally accepted that it is difficult to apply cognitive scientific models to medical training and practice This book is based on a NATO Advanced Research Workshop held in Italy in 1991 the purpose of which was to examine the impact of models of cognition on medical training and practice and to outline future research programmes relating cognition and education and in particular to consider the potential impact of cognitive science on medical training and practice A major discovery presented in the book is that the research areas related to artificial intelligence cognitive psychology and medical decision making are considerably closer both conceptually and theoretically than many of the workshop participants
