Color And Race:

Color Struck Lori Latrice Martin, Hayward Derrick Horton, Cedric Herring, Verna M. Keith, Melvin Thomas, 2017-08-25
Skin color and skin tone has historically played a significant role in determining the life chances of African Americans and other people of color. It has also been important to our understanding of race and the processes of racialization. But what does the relationship between skin tone and stratification outcomes mean? Is skin tone correlated with stratification outcomes because people with darker complexions experience more discrimination than those of the same race with lighter complexions? Is skin tone differentiation a process that operates external to communities of color and is then imposed on people of color? Or is skin tone discrimination an internally driven process that is actively aided and abetted by members of communities of color themselves? Color Struck provides answers to these questions. In addition, it addresses issues such as the relationship between skin tone and wealth inequality, anti-black sentiment and whiteness, Twitter culture, marriage outcomes, and attitudes, gender, racial identity, civic engagement, and politics at predominantly White Institutions. Color Struck can be used as required reading for courses on race, ethnicity, religious studies, history, political science, education, mass communications, African and African American Studies, social work, and sociology. Color and Race, 1973 Hearings United States Congress, House, 1943

Color Theory Aeshah Clotey, Kokomon Clotey, 2019-07-15 Color Theory is a semi-rewrite and a republication of the book Beyond Fear that we wrote in 1998. In this version, we have changed the name of Beyond Fear to Color Theory. We dared to believe that race and the devastating effects of racism could be healed. We asked our readers to consider that the concept of race is an illusion. We have spent years in conversation with many people sharing our view that the concept of race does not exist. We had the audacity to believe that we are all human beings and that we are different only by the color of our skin, our language, and our culture. We learned very quickly that the world was not ready to explore the concept of color, language, or culture in 1998 when our book Beyond Fear was published. The idea that race is an illusion that we made up is an idea that we, the people, have chosen not to examine and accept. In 1998, Bill Clinton, the President of the United States of America, called for a dialogue on race. We only engaged in the dialogue superficially. In 2008, the citizens of the United States elected Barack Obama, the first President of color, to lead what many consider the most powerful nation in the world. The citizens of the United States expressed that the United States was in a post-racial world. However, we continued to hold our monthly Racial Healing Circles, hoping that indeed we were in a post-racial world. Then in 2016, the citizens of the United States of America elected Donald Trump to be the President, and his constituency began to express ideas grounded in racism, fear, and division. The last Wednesday of November 2016, the Racial Healing Circle that we had been holding monthly for the past 30 years was packed. Most participants came to tell their story about their inability to move beyond fear due to their own belief in fear and division.
