Subcommittee on VA, HUD, and Independent Agencies, 2000      Developing an Effective Teacher Mentor Program Melvin P. Heller, Nancy W. Sindelar, 1991 School districts considering a mentoring program need to consider four things 1 the reasons for a teacher mentor program 2 how to start such a program 3 administrative support needed for a successful program and 4 pitfalls to avoid The reasons for having a mentor program are that it benefits the new teacher the mentor and the school The new teacher s opportunities to exchange views with an experienced teacher is a distinct benefit to him her The mentor benefits also however because of the opportunity to share views experiences and strategies The improved teaching that usually results is an asset to the school Starting a program involves six stages establishing a rationale setting criteria for the selection of mentors defining roles inviting the mentors training the mentors and evaluating the program To be successful the program must have administrative support from the board of education the superintendent the central office staff the teacher union and the principal As with any new program anticipating problems can help to avoid them Some pitfalls are overdependence on the part of the protege ego problems on the part of the mentor and the evaluation dilemma arising from the mentor s dual role of confidant and evaluator Mentorship programs promote professionalism by providing continuous staff development during the first year of teaching AMH      Peer Tutoring for K-12 Success Elizabeth Sabrinsky Foster, 1997 Presents elements necessary for successful school wide and or classroom based peer tutoring programs      Developing an Effective Cardiovascular Risk Reduction Program for Inner-city African-American Youth Melinda Ruth Stolley, 1997 Cardiovascular disease CVD is the number one cause of death in the United States and disproportionately affects minorities Although most CVD related deaths occur in adulthood risk factors often begin in childhood Increasingly data suggest that lifestyle changes such as reduction of dietary fat and increased exercise contribute to CVD risk reduction Inasmuch as nutrition and physical activity patterns emerge in childhood high risk dietary habits and sedentary lifestyles need to be addressed prior to full development Programs with this aim however often have not targeted high risk inner city minority children      Journal of Reading , 1983
