

Year 6 Non-Fiction Writing: A Step-by-Step Guide for Parents

The step-by-step extension to non-fiction writing can help you support your child's writing at home. The support is broken down into manageable chunks, starting by writing a simple plan to follow when writing non-fiction writing together. With a plan in place, you can build on this plan and write your own piece. Where you stop each chunk has been chosen to allow you to return to the plan and continue with the next step or even to finish at once. You will find a step that matches where you want to go or what you need to do next.

When the plan of the website you will find a selection of resources that can help you understand each step of the guide. You may also receive a reminder of where that step can be found. The 'Home' icon for each resource will allow the resource to expand and allow you to view that step. Simply tap the resource to go to the resource for that step when it expands together.

Language features of non-fiction writing

By the end of the extension you will have your own plan to follow. The content of the extension can be shared with your child. The plan is intended to help your child to write a piece of non-fiction writing. The plan is not intended to be used as a template for your child's writing. The plan is intended to be used as a guide to help your child to write their own piece of non-fiction writing. Literacy Is Not Enough Brian Cox, 1999-02-15 The last two decades have witnessed a considerable reaction to the progressive utopianism of the 1960s In education debates all over the English speaking world the talk is now of competition back to basics league tables the demands of the market This reaction has gone too far Children need to be helped not only to achieve basic literacy but to read critically to discriminate to evaluate to enjoy great literature It is not enough to help children to achieve literacy if this simply means they read only sufficiently well to be seduced by advertisers and tabloid newspapers The essays in this book are by people engaged in the promotion of English be they primary teachers or university lecturers novelists or poets publishers or social commentators politicians or professors

Developing Readers in the Middle Years Elaine Millard, 1994 Are there developmental stages in reading response Can these be promoted or accelerated by classroom experience The debate about standards in reading has largely ignored such questions and focused on the methods used to introduce children to print in the early years of school Less attention has been given to ways of nurturing the habit once the first stages are past Elaine Millard explores how assumptions about what is pleasurable in reading set an agenda for the middle years which ignores crucial differences in children s reading habits particularly those related to gender She argues that the more advanced reading skills of analysis evaluation and critical response can be introduced to children at this stage but that they require the support of a classroom context that encourages cooperation and which builds on shared habits of reading set brings together seminal articles and key writings on the theme of inclusion and diversity in education. The collection takes disability and special educational need as a starting point from which to develop a broader focus on a range of themes relating to learners who may be marginalised from educational opportunities. This includes for example members of minority ethnic communities, students excluded from schools or who are looked after in public care and other dimensions of exclusion arising from social class, gender or sexuality. The starting point for understanding inclusive education lies in social justice perspectives and this forms the basis for the first volume. Volumes two and three focus on research aimed at developing more inclusive practices both at the levels of schools and school systems and at the levels of inclusive pedagogy enacted in the classroom and through the curriculum. Volume four reflects the range of voices in research on inclusive education drawing on traditionally marginalised voices and those of learners in particular. Three cross-cutting themes are represented across all four volumes: a chronological approach showing how key concepts and perspectives have developed in each area of the literature; identified groups of learners; developing more nuanced readings of how processes of exclusion and inclusion intersect dimensions such as disability, class and race and contexts for learning such as urban education and global or comparative perspectives.
