The British Army in Battle and Its Image 1914-18 Stephen Badsey, 2009-06-30 In this collection of essays of incomparable scholarship Stephen Badsey explores in individual detail how the British Army fought in the First World War how politics and strategy affected its battles and the decisions of senior commanders such as Douglas Haig and how these issues were intimately intertwined with the mass media portrayal of the Army to itself and to the British people Informative provocative and often entertaining based on more than a quarter century of research these essays on the British Army in the First World War range through topics from a trench raid to modern television comedy As a contribution to progressive military history The British Army in Battle and Its Image 1914 1918 proves that the way the British Army fought and its portrayal through the media cannot be separated It is one of a growing number of studies which show that far from being in opposition to each other cultural history and the history of battle must be combined for the First World War to be properly understood For more information visit Stephen Badsey s website www.stephenbadsey.com

The Historian, Television and Television History Graham Roberts, Philip M. Taylor, Nicholas Pronay, 2001 The collected essays in this book arose out of the groundbreaking conference of the International Association of Media and History which brought together key academics and program makers from around the world involved in history and television including Nicholas Pronay Pierre Sorlin and Taylor Downing These essays offer a dialogue between academics and media practitioners that covers archival access analyses of how different TV systems have represented themselves case studies and the future of television Philip M Taylor is a professor of international communications and the director of the Institute of Communications at the University of Leeds Graham Roberts is a lecturer in communications arts at the University of Leeds

Remembering the First World War Bart Ziino, 2014-12-05 Remembering the First World War brings together a group of international scholars to understand how and why the past quarter of a century has witnessed such an extraordinary increase in global popular and academic interest in the First World War both as an event and in the ways it is remembered The book discusses this phenomenon across three key areas The first section looks at family history genealogy and the First World War seeking to understand the power of family history in shaping and reshaping remembrance of the War at the smallest levels as well as popular media and the continuing role of the state and its agencies The second part discusses practices of remembering and the more public forms of representation and negotiation through film literature museums monuments and heritage sites focusing on agency in representing and remembering war The third section covers the return of the War and the increasing determination among individuals to acknowledge and participate in public rituals of remembrance with their own contemporary politics What for instance does it mean to wear a poppy on armistice remembrance day How do symbols like this operate today These chapters will investigate these aspects through a series of case studies Placing remembrance of the First World War in its longer historical and broader transnational context and including illustrations and an afterword by Professor David Reynolds this is the ideal book for all those interested in the history of the Great War and its aftermath

War, Culture, and the Media Ian Stewart, Susan L. Carruthers, 1996 What is the role of the British media in our perception of warfare Are the impressions which we glean from war films television news reports and newspaper stories reliable What are the issues practical and political involved in bringing reports of armed conflict to our television screens Are British military institutions fairly represented and how are enemy forces portrayed How are ideas of nationalism and patriotism incorporated into the presentation of war These are some of the questions addressed in this new collection of essays The book is intended to provide students and general readers with a concise introduction to the main arguments and issues surrounding war and the moving image media in 20th century Britain as well as contributing new perspectives to this increasingly important area of debate Among the subjects discussed are the media build up to the Gulf War representations of the First World War reporting terrorism British imperialism in film transmission technologies and the news reporting of armed conflict the meaning of war toys and war games and postmodernism and military history BOOK JACKET Title
