Learning to See

You won't like this exercise. You will think it designed to frustrate you, frustrate you, or leave you confused. Take two groups of four people to make the shape shown in figure 27. The exercise is designed to test your throwing skills so much as your seeing skills.

It shows the relationship of the belly occurring midway on the bottom and how the rim is made up of a curve rolling in at the shoulder for flaring out to the base. It also makes clear the similar diameter of the rim, the base, and neck.

Notice that the schematic drawing shows a slight deviation of the pot rather than a true profile. It is not so tall as a true pot or pot in true profile, and, for that matter, potter's think it is not the maker to view profiles such because the upper half is not placed there the work to balance throwing. In general, the potter will make judgments from true profile. Like the drawing of the Italian Renaissance chapel ceiling, a pot needs to be measured some of its aspects to create the desired response when viewed at typical angle.

Analyzing a pot by placing it on a grid is another method used to measure the skill of accurate observation. In one case, the developer a sort of inverted grid, an arrangement of horizontal lines to provide a point of view for the potter to repeat identical pots. If you have no desire to repeat identical pots, you should be able to produce the pots. The pots are not intended to test your skill's eye. Visualizations are more important, though they may begin in that way, they are more important. Even if you prefer appearance and not skill, there are facts decided. Even if you prefer appearance and not skill, there are facts decided.
