Abstract: The second of two articles devoted to spatial and temporal trends in economic development and levels of living within the USSR examines patterns in consumption and investment (national income used) at the union republic level, personal services expenditures (oblast and economic regional level), and level of living (small sample of indicators, republic level). There are a number of possible measures which can be employed, none of them completely satisfactory because of specific flaws or lack of comparability of the data (with Western statistics, over different time periods, etc.). Another issue which must be addressed in the assessment of levels of living is the extent to which material consumption and quantitatively based welfare indices adequately reflect quality of life in a broader context. In the Soviet Union, a case can be made for focusing on
