Britain, Emu and the European Economy Steve Bradley, John Whittaker, 2004 In January 1999 11 member countries of the European Union irrevocably locked the foreign exchange values of their currencies to the euro and they committed themselves to abandon their currencies in favour of the euro in 2002 As a result these countries ceased to operate independent monetary policies Monetary policy for the whole euro zone became the responsibility of the European Central Bank ECB whose primary objective is to maintain a low and stable rate of price inflation for the euro currency The rules governing Economic and Monetary Union EMU were laid down in the treaty of Maastricht in 1992 As conditions for entry to EMU the treaty specified convergence criteria which consisted of upper limits for several macroeconomic aggregates including notably a 3 percent maximum for the ratio of the public sector deficit to GDP and 60 percent for the ratio of public debt to GDP In February 1998 the 11 applicant countries submitted statistical analyses relating to their satisfaction of these conditions Despite doubts as to whether some of them had strictly met the conditions the European Commission deemed them all eligible and the euro was launched The British government though more clearly eligible than most other EU countries on the basis of the convergence criteria decided to defer its decision on entry In this paper we consider the arguments for and against Economic and Monetary Union and in particular whether it would be in Britain's interest to join We begin with a brief review of the state of the European economy and an analysis of the first year performance of the new Euro currency

Should the UK become a member of the European Monetary Union?
Helen Mueller, 2002-05-11 Seminar paper from the year 2001 in the subject Business economics Miscellaneous grade 1 7 A

Oxford Brookes University School of Business course Business Environment UK language English abstract Background of EMU and current situation of the UK Since 1952 when the European Coal and Steel Community was founded the face of Europe has changed a lot Barriers have been removed to enable goods services investment and people to move freely within the Community and politicians worked hard to get closer to the ideal of a political and economical united Europe In two months the next major step will be taken by 12 nations of the European Union The EURO will replace the old currencies But Britain although a member of the European Union will not participate in Euro zone in the foreseeable future In 1991 the Maastricht Treaty Treaty on European Union was signed in order to extend the Treaty of Rome 1957 One part of this Treaty was the formation of an economic and monetary union EMU Therefore the European Central Bank ECB was established and a new currency the ECU today called Euro The ECB shall replace the national central banks and its primary objective is to maintain a low and stable rate of price inflation for the euro currency 1 Although Britain had joined the exchange rate system ERM the so called parity grid of the European Monetary System EMS in 1990 and had also signed the Maastricht Treaty it was forced to leave the EMS on Wednesday 16 September 1992 known as Black Wednesday Sterling had dropped below the floor of the grid and all measures to support the currency failed The UK gained opt outs from stage 3 of EMU during the Maastricht conference which means UK shall notify the council whether it intends to move to the third stage and that unless it does it will be under no obligation to do so 2 Now as the EMU comes closer the subject presses hard on the Blair government but a date for the planned referendum which shall bring a decision is still not stated the Single Currency Great Britain. Treasury,2003 This document details the Treasury s assessment of the five economic tests it has established in order for the Government to recommend UK entry into the European single currency in a referendum The five tests seek to define whether a clear and unambiguous case for Economic and Monetary Union EMU entry can be made relating to the following criteria convergence flexibility investment financial services growth stability and jobs Overall the Treasury assessment finds that the financial services test has been met but that the tests for convergence flexibility and employment have not yet been met If sustainable and durable convergence is achieved then it is likely that the investment test would be met Therefore it concludes that although the UK has made real progress towards meeting the five economic tests since 1997 and despite the risks and costs from delaying the benefits of joining a clear and unambiguous case for UK membership of EMU has not yet been made Therefore a decision to join now would not be in the national economic interest Please note that the Treasury has also published 18 background documents to inform the assessment of the
