British Jet Aircraft:

Britain's Jet Age Guy Ellis (Aviation historian), 2016 The jet age began in Britain in May 1941 when the Gloster E 28 39 the first British jet aircraft made its first flight The first British jet fighter was the Gloster Meteor which entered service with the RAF in 1944 and went on to serve with air forces all over the world and the RAF never looked back This was the start of the first generation of British jet aircraft and this volume examines aircraft such as the Meteor and the de Havilland Vampire in the years immediately after the Second World War through the ill fated Comet airliner and the Hawker Sea Hawk in the 1950s to the Gloster Javelin the start of the second generation in the 1960s

British Fighter Aircraft in World War I Mark C. Wilkins, 2021-05-26 A vivid pictorial history Buy this book right now It is rare that ISD gives an instant five star rating to any new volume but this is a rare book Indy Squadron Dispatch World War I witnessed unprecedented growth and innovation in aircraft design construction and as the war progressed mass production Each country generated its own innovations sometimes in surprising ways Albatros Fokker Pfalz and Junkers in Germany and Nieuport Spad Sopwith and Bristol in France and Britain This book focuses on the British approach to fighter design construction and mass production Initially the French led the way in Allied fighter development with their Bleriot trainers then nimble Nieuport Scouts culminating with the powerful fast gun platforms as exemplified by the Spads The Spads had a major drawback however in that they were difficult and counterintuitive to fix in the field The British developed fighters in a very different way Tommy Sopwith had a distinctive approach to fighter design that relied on lightly loaded wings and simple functional box girder fuselages His Camel was revolutionary as it combined all the weight well forward enabling the Camel to turn very quickly but also making it an unforgiving fighter for the inexperienced The Royal Aircraft Factory's SE5a represented another leap forward with its comfortable cockpit modern instrumentation and inline engine clearly influenced by both Spads and German aircraft Each manufacturer and design team vied for the upper hand and deftly and quickly appropriated good ideas from other companies be they friend or foe Developments in tactics and deployment also influenced design from the early reconnaissance planes to turn fighters and finally planes that relied upon formation tactics speed and firepower This book tells their story through extensive photos and accompanying text Handy not only as an aircraft model reference but also as great reading for all history fans DetailScaleView Sidebars add important information at the proper place Air Power History

The British Aircraft Industry and American-led Globalisation Takeshi Sakade, 2021-12-09 Sakade challenges the narrative that the focus of British manufacturing went from Empire to Europe and argues rather that following the Second World War the key relationship was in fact trans Atlantic There is a commonly accepted belief that during the twentieth century British manufacturing declined irreparably that Britain lost its industrial hegemony But this is too simplistic In fact in the decades after 1945 Britain staked out a new role for itself as a key participant in a US led process of globalisation Far from becoming merely a European player the UK actually managed to preserve a key share in a global market and the British defence industry was to a large extent successfully rehabilitated Sakade returns to the original scholarly parameters of the decline controversy and especially questions around post war decline in the fields of high technology and the national defence industrial base Using the case of the strategically critical military and civil aircraft industry he argues that British industry remained relatively robust A valuable read for historians of British aviation and more widely of 20th century British Industry

British Military Jets Kev Darling,2017-07-15 While the world lived with the threat of nuclear war the RAF deployed new and ever more capable jet aircraft to counter the communist threat This book is their story Labor and Industry in Britain ,1951

Meteor from the Cockpit Peter Caygill,2011-02-23 An in depth look at this historic military aircraft including firsthand accounts from those who flew it The Meteor is remembered as the first British jet fighter to enter squadron service and the only jet powered Allied fighter to see action in WW II Subsequent development was limited as a result of its relatively conventional airframe although it did hold the world air speed record for a while The Meteor was immensely strong and many pilots owe their lives to its rugged construction For a whole generation of pilots the aircraft the Meatbox as it was affectionately known provided the ideal introduction to jet powered flight It did suffer a high accident rate but many of the losses were due to lack of knowledge of the stresses of high speed flight at low level and a misguided training program Long after its first flight the Meteor lives on as it is still used by Martin Baker to test ejection seats testimony to the basic soundness of the design This book looks into the aircraft s design history and development through many different variants and includes many firsthand accounts of flying the aircraft in peace and war

The Jet Race and the Second World War S. Mike Pavelec,2007-02-28 In the 1930s as nations braced for war the German military build up caught Britain and the United States off guard particularly in aviation technology The unending quest for speed resulted in the need for radical alternatives to piston engines In Germany Dr Hans von Ohain was the first to complete a flight worthy turbojet engine for aircraft It was installed in a Heinkel designed aircraft and the Germans began the jet age on August 27 1939 The Germans led the jet race throughout the war and were the first to produce jet aircraft for combat operations In England the doggedly determined Frank Whittle also developed a turbojet engine but without the support enjoyed by his German counterpart The British came second in the jet race when Whittle s engine powered the Gloster Pioneer on May 15 1941 The Whittle Gloster relationship continued and produced the only Allied combat jet aircraft during the war the Meteor which was relegated to Home Defense in Britain In America General Electric copied the Whittle designs and Bell Aircraft contracted to build the first American jet plane On October 1 1942 a lackluster performance from the Bell Airacomet ushered in the American jet age The Yanks forged ahead and had numerous engine and airframe programs in development by the end of the war But the Germans did it right and did it first while the Allies lagged throughout the war only rising to technological prominence on the ashes of the German defeat Pavelec s analysis of the jet race uncovers all the excitement in the high stakes race to develop effective jet engines for warfare and transport

Grunden,2005 Grunden s analysis of this fundamental flaw in the Japanese war effort seamlessly weaves together science technology and military history to provide an entirely unique look at a crucial but understudied aspect of World War II Comparing the science and weapons programs of all the major combatants he demonstrates that Japan s failure was nearly inevitable given its paucity of strategic resources an inadequate industrial base the absence of effective centralized management to coordinate research military hostility toward civilian scientists and bitter interservice rivalries In the end Japan could not overcome these obstacles and thus failed to make the transition to the kind of Big Science it needed to ward off its enemies and dominate the Far East BOOK JACKET      The British National Bibliography Arthur James Wells,1991      U.S. Air Services ,1950      Aircraft Armament Louis Bruchiss,1945
