Decision Making Process In Journalism:

The Decision-making Process in Journalism Carl Hausman,1988

Carl Hausman,1990 This practical guide to journalistic ethics is intended both for journalism students and professionals in print and broadcast media It presents standards to use in making difficult decisions about gathering writing and presenting news stories The author begins by providing criteria to determine if a story is in fact news including tips on distinguishing news from advertising The book then puts forth standards of truth objectivity and fairness that reporters should follow The legal definitions of libel and invasion of privacy are given along with some striking reminders of how the power of the press can profoundly affect people's lives

The Media and Political Process P. Eric Louw,2005-05-20 The Media and Political Process examines the increasingly topical subject of the political process and assesses The nature of the relationship between mass media and the political process The impact of media on existing political frameworks The implications of media on politics Eric Louw uses a number of case studies including political celebrity war and terrorism to provide a media studies perspective on how media workers journalists public affairs officers spin doctors impact upon the political process The book also considers the media's role in promoting a range of twentieth century ideologies and emerging dominant discourses

The Community Standard,2007 This study describes and maps the process

journalists employ when deciding issues of coverage content and treatment of news at community newspapers within the context of community standards Much scholarship has been devoted to how journalists should make ethical decisions of news judgment in accordance with moral ethical and social responsibility theory But little has been done in the way of describing and mapping how journalists specifically community journalists actually make these on deadline news decisions and how the concept of community standards plays into those decisions Through the use of naturalistic inquiry methodology in this case a triangulation of qualitative depth interview methods informant and ethnographic within the context of society this research describes the factors considered by community journalists when faced with decisions of news judgment how that process takes place and how and where community standards fit into that process Data indicate that values and value based moral and ethical reasoning are tempered by at least three considerations in the decision making process 1 how coverage and treatment will affect the journalist 2 how coverage and treatment will affect others and 3 the public instructional value before being filtered through a screen of community standards prior to the final rendering of a news judgment decision Furthermore findings offer a base on which to construct a model of community journalism decision making useful for study and discussions of ethical decision making among community journalism scholars instructors and students and for its applications in practical situations by future or novice community journalists

Media, Wars and Politics Ekaterina

Balabanova,2017-11-30 The interaction between media and foreign policy is a critical dimension of the so called age of new military humanitarianism The media is now more effective in gathering and distributing information all over the world and media coverage of humanitarian wars allows for information and images to reach a wide audience with great immediacy and realism For policy making the 24 7 news cycle means high levels of exposure to fast breaking international stories receiving global attention and producing a powerful do something effect This topical book widens the debate beyond US media and policy making by considering the case of Western and Eastern European media and policy processes It tests the wider application of existing theoretical approaches and provides useful comparisons allowing the reader to draw conclusions on the media policy relationship It is an excellent resource for all those interested in political communication European politics and media studies
