C. de Moura, 2017-02-04 This book provides an introduction to logic and mathematical induction which are the basis of any deductive computational framework A strong mathematical foundation of the logical engines available in modern proof assistants such as the PVS verification system is essential for computer scientists mathematicians and engineers to increment their capabilities to provide formal proofs of theorems and to certify the robustness of software and hardware systems The authors present a concise overview of the necessary computational and mathematical aspects of logic placing emphasis on both natural deduction and sequent calculus Differences between constructive and classical logic are highlighted through several examples and exercises Without neglecting classical aspects of computational logic the authors also highlight the connections between logical deduction rules and proof commands in proof assistants presenting simple examples of formalizations of the correctness of algebraic functions and algorithms in PVS Applied Logic for Computer Scientists will not only benefit students of computer science and mathematics but also software hardware automation electrical and mechatronic engineers who are interested in the application of formal methods and the related computational tools to provide mathematical certificates of the quality and accuracy of their products and technologies

Creating New Knowledge in Management Ellen O'Connor, 2011-12-07 Creating New Knowledge in Management rediscovers lost sources in the work of Mary Parker Follett and Chester Barnard providing a foundation for management as a unique and coherent discipline This book begins by explaining that research universities and the management field in particular have splintered into smaller and less related parts It then recovers a lost tradition of integrating management and the humanities exploring ways of building on this convention to advance the unique art and science of business By way of Follett and Barnard's work author Ellen S O Connor demonstrates how the shared values purposes and customs of management and the humanities can be used to build an enterprise that will help to meet the challenges of business today Igniting approaches to management that build on humanistic traditions is the ultimate goal of this book Therefore the text ends with two experiments one in the classroom and one with a business executive that take up this call and offer a perspective on where management must go next Arguments from Ignorance Douglas
