Architectural Intelligence Molly Wright Steenson, 2022-11-01 Architects who engaged with cybernetics artificial intelligence and other technologies poured the foundation for digital interactivity In Architectural Intelligence Molly Wright Steenson explores the work of four architects in the 1960s and 1970s who incorporated elements of interactivity into their work Christopher Alexander Richard Saul Wurman Cedric Price and Nicholas Negroponte and the MIT Architecture Machine Group all incorporated technologies including cybernetics and artificial intelligence into their work and influenced digital design practices from the late 1980s to the present day Alexander long before his famous 1977 book A Pattern Language used computation and structure to visualize design problems Wurman popularized the notion of information architecture Price designed some of the first intelligent buildings and Negroponte experimented with the ways people experience artificial intelligence even at architectural scale Steenson investigates how these architects pushed the boundaries of architecture and how their technological experiments pushed the boundaries of technology What did computational cybernetic and artificial intelligence researchers have to gain by engaging with architects and architectural problems And what was this new space that emerged within these collaborations At times Steenson writes the architects in this book characterized themselves as anti architects and their work as anti architecture The projects Steenson examines mostly did not result in constructed buildings but rather in design processes and tools computer programs interfaces digital environments Alexander Wurman Price and Negroponte laid the foundation for many of our contemporary interactive practices from information architecture to interaction design from machine learning to smart cities

Advances in Artificial General Intelligence Ben Goertzel, Pei Wang, 2007 The topic of this book the creation of software programs displaying broad deep human style general intelligence is a grand and ambitious one And yet it is far from a frivolous one what the papers in this publication illustrate is that it is a fit and proper subject for serious science and engineering exploration No one has yet created a software program with human style or even roughly human level general intelligence but we now have a sufficiently rich intellectual toolkit that it is possible to think about such a possibility in detail and make serious attempts at design analysis and engineering possibility in detail and make serious attempts at design analysis and engineering This is the situation that led to the organization of the 2006 AGIRI Artificial General Intelligence Research Institute workshop and to the decision to publish a book from contributions by the speakers at the conference The material presented here only scratches the surface of the AGI related R D work that is occurring around the world at this moment But the editors are pleased to have had the chance to be involved in organizing and presenting at least a small percentage of the contemporary progress
