Changing Health Behaviour:

Predicting and Changing Health Behaviour: Research and Practice with Social Cognition Models Mark Conner, Paul Norman, 2015-05-16 This popular established text has been expanded to include the most up to date research on social cognition models and health behaviours This edition takes account of important developments in the field and features Three completely new chapters on Self determination Theory Prototype Willingness Model and Health Behaviour Change Techniques Updated work on the health belief model protection motivation theory social cognitive theory and the theory of planned behavior New models and greater focus on health behaviour change Providing the theoretical background and examples of how to apply the most common social cognition models to health behaviours this book thoroughly examines how to Assess the advantages and disadvantages of using each of these models Appropriately apply each model in practice Adequately analyze and report the results Apply the models to change health behaviour Predicting and Changing Health Behaviour boasts many of the leading names in the field and provides key reading for advanced undergraduate and postgraduate students health promoters health psychologists and others assessing health behaviour Understanding and Changing Health Behaviour Charles Abraham, Paul Norman, Mark Conner, 2013-11-26 The identification of the factors predicting health behaviour has become a major focus of research in the field of health psychology and related disciplines This awareness not only increases our understanding but also provides important targets for interventions to change health behaviour Understanding and Changing Health Behaviour focuses on a range of key social cognitive factors in this process using examples from an impressive breadth of applied settings that include smoking cessation condom use and breast examination The book features contributions from some of the best known researchers in the field Understanding and Changing Health Behaviour Charles Abraham, Paul Norman, Mark Conner, 2000 Focuses on a range of key social cognitive factors in interventions to change health behaviour using examples from an impressive breadth of applied settings The book features contributions from some of the best known researchers in the field Health Behavior Change Stephen Rollnick, Pip Mason, Christopher Butler, 1999 Particularly relevant to US practice this book offers a description and demonstration of a method for changing health behaviours based on brief negotiation with clients Health Behavior Change Andrew Prestwich, Jared Kenworthy, Mark Conner, 2017-10-16 This is the first textbook to present not only the theoretical foundations to health behavior change but also the methods by which change can be assessed and the practical contexts where theory and methods can be applied HEALTH PROMOTION AND EDUCATION MADHUMITA DOBE, 2022-04-25 This book is addressed to undergraduate and post graduate students researchers practitioners and policy makers to serve as an useful guide for working or conducting research in public health community nursing community nutrition psychology sociology social work and other related disciplines Changing Health Behaviour Jill Rutter, 2002-01-16 Can theory driven interventions using social cognition models change health behaviour How should theoretical models be adapted for intervention What are the implications for policy and practice For many years social cognition models have been at the forefront of research into predicting and explaining health behaviours Until recently there have been few attempts to go beyond prediction and understanding to intervention but now the position has changed and a number of excellent interventions have been set up The purpose of this book is to bring them together in one volume After an introductory chapter on the models and interventions to be included there are nine chapters that each address a particular behaviour or set of behaviours written by the authors of the interventions themselves Chapters 2 to 4 examine risk related behaviours safer sex smoking exposure to radon gas Chapters 5 to 7 turn to health enhancing behaviours and screening reducing fat intake uptake of vitamin C breast self examination participation in cervical and colorectal cancer screening and Chapters 8 to 10 explore road safety speeding by drivers pedestrian behaviour and cycle helmet use The chapters follow a common structure a presentation of the epidemiological facts about the behaviour and why an intervention was needed an outline of the way in which the theoretical model being used was adapted for the intervention a presentation of the experimental results and a discussion of their theoretical and practical implications The book ends with a chapter of commentary on the challenges of devising theory based interventions Following on from the highly successful Predicting Health Behaviour edited by Mark Conner and Paul Norman this book will be recognised as a ground breaking text in the psychology of health for students researchers and practitioners alike

Canadian Public Health Journal ,1929 Journal of the American Dietetic Association ,2000 EBOOK Theory in a Nutshell Don Nutbeam,2015-03-06 Highly Commended in the British Medical Association book awards 2011 The use of theory in the planning and implementation of health promotion programs will more reliably produce positive outcomes Following on from the success of the second edition Theory in a Nutshell 3rd Edition explores the main theoretical concepts and models in health promotion and explains the significance practical application and impact of different theories on the individual community and organisation This edition includes concise reviews of established theories such as social cognitive theory and health belief model as well as expanding on new developments in the field including evidence based policy making and health impact assessment Thoroughly revised and updated the book maintains the accessible style suitable for public health practitioners health promotion and health education specialists epidemiologists and social policy makers as well as students of public health and health promotion Testing the Theory of Reasoned Action and Its Extensions Edward E. Marandu,2008-12-31 This study investigates using the Theory of Reasoned Action and its extensions factors that determine intention to use condoms among tertiary institution students in Botswana The data used was obtained from a questionnaire survey of 785 students The findings partially support existing theory for the three explanatory factors of intention were significant without controlling for the effect of each other However contrary to empirical findings in advanced countries subjective norm societal factor played a larger role in explaining intention than attitude although the evidence is mixed These findings suggest that in Western cultures where individualist freedom is emphasised behavioural intention would generally be determined not only by personal attitudes but more so by the attitudes of others Further the relatively undeveloped economic environment might impose behavioural constraints In several African countries these broader social environmental issues pose critical and sometimes binding influence on the behaviour of many individuals It follows that a study of behavioural intentions in the African scene which places greater emphasis on measuring attitudinal factors may be misleading because of under specification of the causal social environmental perceived societal and perceived control factors

Journal of the Canadian Dietetic Association ,1993 Handbook of Health Behavior Research I David S. Gochman,1997-08-31 The primary objective of this Handbook is to provide statements about health behaviour research as a basic body of knowledge moving into the 21st century It is expected that the Handbook will remain in use and current through 2005 at least The Handbook presents a broad and representative selection of mid 1990s health behaviour findings and concepts in a single work While texts and books of readings are available in related areas such as health psychology medical anthropology medical sociology behavioural health behavioural risk factors and changing health behaviours none of these works was intended to address basic research generated knowledge of health behaviour and none was intended to transcend individual disciplines Accordingly none of these works presents a broad and representative spectrum of basic health behaviour research reflecting multidisciplinary activities One work with a title identical to this one but for one word the Handbook of Health Behaviour Change Shumaker et al 1990 deals almost exclusively with applications This Handbook thus presents the reader with the state of the art in health behaviour research something not found elsewhere

Psychology and Psychiatry Jeannette Milgrom, Graham D. Burrows, 2001 In the traditional medical setting clinical psychology and psychiatry have operated independently but clinicians now recognise that psychologists and psychiatrists working together can maximise the effectiveness of treatment and improve quality of life for individuals and families Up to 25% of medical patients present with significant psychological problems and unless practice is integrated these problems often remain untreated An integrated practice and training allows clinicians to recognise and treat psychological problems thereby reducing the economic and social costs associated with such illness In addition the input of psychology and psychiatry is now understood to have a role in disease progress and medical management as well as in prevention and health promotion Compares the disciplines of clinical psychology and psychiatry and their practice in medical environments Provides a how to and what to expect for clinicians who use the services of psychologists and psychiatrists Forecasts the development and growth of this approach in medical social and policy contexts Offers professional development guidance to psychologists and psychiatrists working outside the medical arena Indian Journal of Leprosy ,1991
