Life Span Developmental Psychology: Methodological Issues is based on a conference held at West Virginia University in 1971 that focused on the general topic of Life Span Developmental Psychology. The conference provided a forum for the discussion of a variety of methodological issues related to the study of developmental processes over the life span. The principal objectives of the Life Span Conference have been not only to explicate by successive approximation the range of empirical phenomena with which a life span developmental psychology should be concerned but also to explore issues about theory, measurement, design, and data analysis which bear upon it. The book opens with a chapter on ethical issues in developmental psychology. This is followed by separate chapters on topics such as cross-cultural research in developmental psychology, the implications of the two models that have had the greatest impact on developmental psychology, the mechanistic-reactive organism model and the organismic-active organism model, and research strategies and measurement methods for investigating human development.
