✓ Exclusively available on IvyPanda

Introduction

Drama is one of the literary genres, which is presented in different ways in books. Monologues and dialogues add more emotion to the storytelling. Authors can convey the plot through a monologue or dialogue or limit their work to them exclusively. Thus, poems consisting only of a dialogue or a monologue are another way to convey information through a non-standard approach. This style of storytelling allows conveying the atmosphere, personal views, and opinions of the characters.

My Last Duchess

Recognized genius poetic skills and the display of characters through monologue can be traced in Robert Browning's work My Last Duchess. The monologue in the poem clearly expresses the emotions of the narrator, and the details that the author mentions complement the idea of the main character's opinion on the topics touched upon. The monologue presentation style makes this story dramatic and sensual.

The important aspect is that there is an invisible hero with whom the dialogue takes place only unilaterally. This distinguishes this work from others, for example, Porphyria's Lover by the same author. Due to this, the reader can fully feel the atmosphere of what is happening and imagine the place. Additionally, the monologue is suggesting certain reactions within the text.

Browning brings a lot of detail to My Last Duchess to consider and ponder. The author deliberately does not reveal the subtleties of each, leaving the will of interpretation. Moreover, each detail has a link to the overall picture. For example, the important detail is that the duke kept the painting behind the curtain (Gwynn 414). Before showing the painting, he pulled back the curtain, which demonstrated his unwillingness to present the painting to the public and to have control over who sees it.
