Academic Discourse and Critical Consciousness Patricia Bizzell, 1992-12-18 This collection of essays traces the attempts of one writing teacher to understand theoretically and to respond pedagogically to what happens when students from diverse backgrounds learn to use language in college Bizzell begins from the assumption that democratic education requires us to attempt to educate all students including those whose social or ethnic backgrounds may have offered them little experience with academic discourse Over the ten year period chronicled in these essays she has seen herself primarily as an advocate for such students sometimes called basic writers Bizzell's views on education for critical consciousness widely discussed in the writing field are represented in most of the essays in this volume But in the last few chapters and in the intellectual autobiography written as the introduction to the volume she calls her previous work into question on the grounds that her self appointment as an advocate for basic writers may have been presumptuous and her hopes for the politically liberating effects of academic discourse misplaced She concludes by calling for a theory of discourse that acknowledges the need to argue for values and pedagogy that can assist these arguments to proceed more inclusively than ever before The essays in this volume constitute the main body of work in which Bizzell developed her influential and often cited ideas Organized chronologically they present a picture of how she has grappled with major issues in composition studies over the past decade In the process she sketches a trajectory for the development of composition studies as an academic discipline

Academic Voices Kjersti Fløttum, Trine Dahl, Torodd Kinn, 2006-08-10 This book explores how the voices of authors and other researchers are manifested in academic discourse and how the author handles the polyphonic interaction between these various parties It represents a unique study of academic discourse in that it takes a doubly contrastive approach focusing on the two factors of discipline and language at the same time It is based on a large electronic corpus of 450 research articles from three disciplines economics linguistics and medicine in three languages English French and Norwegian The book investigates whether disciplines and languages may be said to represent different cultures with regard to person manifestation in the texts What is being studied is thus cultural identities as tendencies in linguistic practices For the majority of the features focused on e g metatext and bibliographical references the discipline factor turns out to contribute more strongly to the variation observed than the language factor However for some of the features e g pronouns and negation the language factor is also quite strong Additional background information on the investigations reported in this book can be found at www.uib.no/kiap

Academic Discourse across Cultures Igor Lakić, Milica Vuković, Branka Živković, 2015-09-10 Academic discourse has recently become a blooming field of research for linguists interested in genre and discourse analysis as well as pragmatics

The methodology and conventions employed in academic discourse however vary across cultures to a certain degree and often represent obstacles for publishing in international journals for authors whose native language is not English as top journals tend to centre on the Anglo Saxon academic writing norms This is one of the major reasons why national academic discourses need to be linguistically profiled and studied and contrastively compared against these norms This volume contributes to this very objective by shedding light on academic discourse as effectuated in various mostly Balkan countries and contrasts it against the corresponding western English discourse Furthermore academic discourse is studied through a variety of genres it can assume such as research articles conference proceedings and university lectures Through exploring the cultural differences in academic discourse and the standards of international academic writing this volume offers readers a chance to become better equipped in publishing abroad Opening with a chapter focusing on the general structure of research articles and national writing habits as a potential hindrance to publishing abroad the book goes on to study the rhetorical structure of the abstracts introductions and conclusions of research articles in linguistics economics and civil engineering The second part of the book deals with hedging contrastively studied in international and national journals with the following chapters studying cohesion as accomplished in academic writing Part three deals with the syntactic and semantic features of academic discourse This book will be of particular interest to linguists interested in genre and discourse analysis in general and academic discourse and will also appeal to scholars from other research backgrounds wishing to familiarise themselves with international and national academic conventions and thus overcome the hurdles relating to academic writing conventions when publishing abroad

Personally Speaking Candace Spigelman, 2004-10-07 Responding to contemporary discussion about using personal accounts in academic writing Personally Speaking Experience as Evidence in Academic Discourse draws on classical and current rhetorical theory feminist theory and relevant examples from both published writers and first year writing students to illustrate the advantages of blending experiential and academic perspectives Candace Spigelman examines how merging personal and scholarly worldviews produces useful contradictions and contributes to a more a complex understanding in academic writing This rhetorical move allows for greater insights than the reading or writing of experiential or academic modes separately does Personally Speaking foregrounds the semi fictitious nature of personal stories and the rhetorical possibilities of evidence as Spigelman provides strategies for writing instructors who want to teach personal academic argument while supplying practical mechanisms for evaluating experiential claims The volume seeks to complicate and intensify disciplinary debates about how compositionists should write for publication and what kinds of writing should be taught to composition students Spigelman not only supplies evidence as to why the personal can count as evidence but also relates how to use it effectively by including student samples that reflect particular features of personal writing Finally she lays the groundwork to move narrative from its current site as confessional writing to the domain of academic discourse explores the relationship between shared disciplinary norms and individual traits in academic speech and writing. Despite the standardising pressure of cultural and language related factors, academic communication remains in many ways a highly personal affair with active participation in a disciplinary community requiring a multidimensional discourse that combines the professional, institutional, social and individual identities of its members. The first section of the volume deals with tensions involving individual, collective values and the analysis of collective vs individual discursive features in academic discourse. The second section comprises longitudinal investigations of the academic output of single scholars so as to highlight the individuality in their choices and the reasons for not conforming with the commonality of conventions shared by their professional community. The third part deals with genres that are meant to impose commonality on the members of an academic community not only in the drafting of specialized texts but also when these are reviewed or evaluated for possible publication.

Cross-Linguistic and Cross-Cultural Perspectives on Academic Discourse Eija Suomela-Salmi, Fred Dervin, 2009-11-19. The goal of this volume is to examine academic discourse (AD) from cross-linguistic and cross-cultural perspectives. The adjective 'Cross-cultural' in the volume title is not just limited to national contexts but also includes a cross-disciplinary perspective. Twelve scientific fields are under scrutiny in the articles. One of the unique aspects of the volume is the inclusion of a variety of foreign languages: English as a lingua franca, Spanish, French, Swedish, Russian, German, Italian, and Norwegian. Besides, in several articles dealing with oral AD, comparisons and parallels are also established with written AD. The research methodologies used in the studies are varied and they offer an overview of the diversity and richness of approaches to AD. All in all, it is hoped that the volume appeals not only to young researchers but also to confirmed scholars interested in cross-linguistic and cross-cultural aspects of AD. It will also be of interest to language teachers or teachers who are involved with e.g. international students and academic mobility.

Why Debate Shawn F. Briscoe, Minh Luong, Kari Jahnsen, Li Xi, 2016. In Why Debate Transformed by Academic Discourse, Shawn F. Briscoe and a diverse group of individuals introduce readers to academic competitive debate in our secondary schools and institutions of higher learning. Over the course of twenty chapters, eighteen authors address the role of academic debate on educational development, interpersonal relationships, career and professional lives, and society. Misunderstood or unknown by outsiders, academic debate has far-reaching impacts upon our world. This collection of essays highlights the significance the activity has not just on those who engage in it but upon people everywhere. Competitive debate serves as a foundation for growth as students learn to navigate through society, form relationships, and develop the skills they need to succeed in college and beyond. Those who participate in the activity develop skills and dispositions that help them succeed in their chosen professions. Ultimately, debate makes us aware of what needs to change in the world and it gives us the ability to effect meaningful change.
