Corruption Development And Inequality:

Corruption, Development, and Inequality Peter M. Ward,1989-01-01 Does Corruption Affect Income Inequality and Poverty? Mr.Sanjeev Gupta,1998-05-01 This paper demonstrates that high and rising corruption increases income inequality and poverty by reducing economic growth the progressivity of the tax system the level and effectiveness of social spending and the formation of human capital and by perpetuating an unequal distribution of asset ownership and unequal access to education These findings hold for countries with different growth experiences at different stages of development and using various indices of corruption An important implication of these results is that policies that reduce corruption will also lower income inequality and poverty The Impact of Economic Inequality and Public Sector Corruption on Human Development Ferdi Ilkhan,2015-02-04 Thesis M A from the year 2015 in the subject Economics Case Scenarios University of Westminster course International Economic Policy and Analysis language English abstract As a society we are always interested in knowing how much progress we have made over time In the past economists analysts and policy makers mainly referred to changes in the level of gross domestic product to reflect how the population of a particular country has progressed during a given period of time Indeed the average material standard of the population is an essential tool in assessing how much progress a society has made However various global regional and local reports on human development have demonstrated that economic growth alone is far from sufficient as the sole condition for progressing in human development Therefore accurately measuring human development requires a frame that includes different key economic and social indices Therefore we need to think about a series of narrow and broad indicators such as per capita income but also life expectancy education and the extent of poverty Based on this idea there are different approaches that have become prominent in trying to explain what progress actually means to a society and how to measure the actual state of human development in a nation Gallardo 2009 However this dissertation is based on the results presented by the Human Development Index known to be one of the most valuable concepts in attempting to capture the state of human development in a country According to its latest values Turkey scores far above Brazil in the Human Development Index 2013 United Nations Development Programme 2014 although the World Bank indicates that Brazil has a higher level of per capita income than in Turkey The World Bank 2014 This paper supports the hypothesis that in particular the issues of economic inequality and public sector corruption have a significant impact on human development related indices Therefore by critically analysing and comparing relevant statistics of two comparable economies Turkey and Brazil this paper intends to provide a valuable explanation regarding the question how can a country with lower levels of per capita income achieve higher human development outcomes Corruption and Development in Asian Nations Rita Shah,2025-01-03 Corruption and Development in Asian Nations examines the pervasive issue of corruption in Asia ranging from local officials demands for accommodation to multi million dollar bribery by corrupt politicians We explore how corruption affects various sectors including job related
