Our War Too Margaret Paton-Walsh, 2002 In the late 1930s a number of American women especially those allied with various peace and isolationist groups protested against the nation's entry into World War II While their story is fairly well known Margaret Paton Walsh reveals a far less familiar story of women who fervently felt that American intervention was absolutely necessary Paton Walsh recounts how the United States became involved in the war but does so through the eyes of American women who faced it as a necessary evil Covering the period between 1935 and 1941 she examines how these women functioned as political actors even though they were excluded from positions of power through activism in women's organizations, informal women's networks, and even male-dominated lobbying groups. In the Great Debate over whether America should enter the war, some women favored aid to the Allies not because they hoped for war but because they hoped aid would forestall more direct U.S. involvement, but also because they believed war was preferable to a Nazi victory. Paton Walsh shows that this activism involved some of the most prominent women of their day: Elizabeth Cutter Morrow, whose son-in-law Charles Lindbergh was an isolationist spokesman, supported the revision of the Neutrality Acts to allow the sale of arms to the Allies and expressed her support in a national radio broadcast. Soon other women joined this debate: Esther Brunauer of the AAUW, journalist Dorothy Thompson, and organizations like the League of Women Voters and National Women's Trade Union League broke from the pacifist tradition to advocate American aid for the Allied cause. Focusing on the conflict in Europe, Paton Walsh shows how these women grasped the implications of the Lend-Lease program for America's entry into the war but supported it nevertheless. By late 1941, the Women's Division of the Fight for Freedom Committee had been established, no longer merely advocating aid to Britain to keep American boys out of battle; this organization supported direct American involvement in the war as a means of stopping Nazi oppression. While most historians have focused on women's pacifism, Paton Walsh connects women more directly to world events and shows how those interventionists reformulated maternalist ideas to justify and explain their beliefs. Our War Too is a story of American women trying to reconcile the irreconcilable to preserve both their principles and their peace. It expands our understanding of women as political actors and thinkers about foreign policy as it sheds new light on American public opinion over the build-up to the war.

Too Bad to Die Francine Mathews, 2015-03-03 A tense and enthralling historical thriller in which British Naval Intelligence officer Ian Fleming attempts to foil a Nazi plot to assassinate FDR, Churchill, and Stalin, November 1943. Weary of his deskbound status in the Royal Navy intelligence officer Ian Fleming spends his spare time spinning stories in his head that are much more exciting than his own life until the critical Tehran Conference when Winston Churchill, Franklin Roosevelt, and Josef Stalin meet to finalize the D-Day invasion. With the Big Three in one place, Fleming is tipped off that Hitler's top assassin has infiltrated the conference. Seizing his chance to play a part in a real-life action story, Fleming goes undercover to stop the Nazi killer. Between martinis with beautiful women, he survives brutal attacks and meets a seductive Soviet spy who may know more than Fleming realizes. As he works to uncover the truth and unmask the assassin, Fleming is forced to accept that betrayal sometimes comes from the most unexpected quarters and that one's literary creations may prove eerily close to one's own life. Brilliantly inventive, utterly gripping, and suspenseful, Too Bad to Die is Francine Mathews's best novel yet and confirms her place as a master of historical fiction.
