Assessing Housing Need Great Britain. Scottish Development Department,1977 This manual is primarily intended to be one of technical guidance directed mainly at the officers in local authorities who carry out the work of housing needs assessment or who are responsible for initiating organising or monitoring the work This objective was not an easy one to meet satisfactory for a number of reasons the level of technical knowledge and experience of needs assessment varies widely a number of local authorities in Scotland have carried out quite detailed assessments but there are many where first hand experience of the approach methods and techniques recommended here is limited housing needs and issues vary widely from one part of the country to another and a particular technique or combination of techniques which may apply in an urban area may not necessarily do so in a rural one and vice versa
