Assessing Risks To Health Methodologic Approaches:

Assessing Risks to Health John C. Blair, 1993-03-30 Risk assessment is a highly important activity of numerous governmental health and regulatory bodies. It is on the accuracy of quantitative and qualitative measurement that the decisions of government policymakers depend. Those decisions of course are intended to manage risks. That management frequently involves regulations over a wide range of individual and environmental exposures. Bailar and his colleagues examine the methodological challenges faced by federal agencies involved in risk assessment and the sometimes controversial implications and consequences of methodological considerations. The authors query how given a choice of methods one is chosen, the role that method related issues and problems may have in the acceptance of risk assessment findings and what impact the controversies regarding methods have on the role of risk assessment in overall risk management. Ten hazards as assessed by a range of federal agencies with a variety of assessment methods give topicality and specificity to the analysis. Among the risks addressed are ethylene dibromide, formaldehyde, passive smoking, and the use of mammography for breast cancer screening. The authors conclude with a setting of priorities for risk assessment because risks to human health clearly outstrip resources available for accurate assessment.

Global Harmonization of Methodological Approaches to Nutrient Intake Recommendations National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Health and Medicine Division, Food and Nutrition Board, 2018-06-29 The National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine convened a public workshop in September 2017 to explore the evidence for achieving global harmonization of methodological approaches to establishing nutrient intake recommendations. Participants reviewed current nutrient intake recommendations, discussed the feasibility of harmonizing approaches to setting such recommendations globally, examined the development of principles by which they may be applied in diverse contexts that relate to individuals or populations or regulatory purposes, and examined perceptions and acceptance of nutrient intake recommendations by different stakeholders. This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop.

Welfare of production animals: assessment and management of risks Frans J.M. Smulders, Bo Algers, 2023-09-04 This book, the fifth in the series Food Safety Assurance and Veterinary Public Health, has been conceived by a total of 33 internationally recognised experts from 11 different countries in Europe and from the USA, Canada, and Australia with backgrounds ranging from veterinary medicine, animal science, biology, and microbiology to psychology, philosophy, and ethics. It provides an up-to-date overview of the science of animal welfare and its assessment, of options for the assessment and management of risks for the welfare of production animals, and of the ramifications these may have for the safety of foods of animal origin. This volume is targeted at veterinary practitioners, official veterinarians in a control function, animal and food scientists, welfare scientists, students in animal welfare, auditing and inspection officials, and risk managers at all levels of animal production. Other publications in the Food Safety Assurance and Veterinary Public Health series are Volume 1 Food safety assurance in the pre-harvest phase, Volume 2
