America Hurrah trilogy in the context of postmodern theory All three authors interpret the two dolls destructive behavior as impersonations of America s latent aggression and as advent of a posthumanist culture Schmidt 125 the 1960s While Plunka praises Motel for its sharp wittedness Grabes questions the ability of the play to criticize existing social conditions Especially does he condemn the play for its Spenglerian Determinism Kerstin Schmidt s approach on the other hand opens new aspects on Motel with her focus on the representation of the postmodern sense of identity in the play Altogether however the authors agree that Man doll and Woman doll symbolize the self destructive forces within American society Hence they see the two dolls not so much as active agents but as passive victims of postmodern American society From this perspective the play must be read as a dark satire on American society which hardly leaves any hope for social change
