Arbiter In Council:

The Arbiter in Council. [By Francis W. Hirst.]. ARBITER., Francis Wrigley Hirst, 1906 The Arbiter in Council
Francis Wrigley Hirst, 1906 The Arbiter in Council (Classic Reprint) Francis Wrigley Hirst, 2018-01-18 Excerpt from The Arbiter in Council The death of my old friend the Arbiter has left me alone to arrange and edit a work of which he is the principal author without his supervision Happily before the sudden illness which ended his long and useful life we had spent many hours together reading over and correcting the reports and his own contributions had all been carefully revised He particularly requested me not to let our friends who took part in the discussion alter the sentiments they had expressed If that were allowed he said the dialogue would lose its vivacity and character You he went on must correct the report as an editor in the interest of the reader Cast out rubble shorten Where you can do so without altering the sense let there be as little repetition as possible for remember that the eye though so much more rapid and therefore with less excuse is a far more impatient organ than the ear The others all agreed the more willingly as the course proposed relieved them both of labour and responsibility They only stipulated that their identity should be concealed The names therefore are fictitious but I must beg the reader to believe that by this device veracity has been protected from the inroads of timidity and caution Certainly we all tried to speak without reserve guided by a precept that the Arbiter had either recalled or invented for the occasion living is the art of making compromises talking is the art of avoiding them About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes
