Declaration of the Thirteen united States

Where in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bonds which connect them with another, and to assume among the powers of Nature, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to promote their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, in the long course of human affairs, has ever been distinguished by a deference to the opinions of the majority, and accordingly all well-governed States have been accustomed to alter their former Constitutions, when they have been found to be in any manner inconsistent with the public Good.
