The Entanglement Alva Noë,2023-06-27 In The Entanglement philosopher Alva No explores the inseparability of life art and philosophy and argues that we have radically underestimated the significance of this long recognized but underappreciated reality what he refers to as the entanglement The core of The Entanglement is the idea that human existence is inextricably aesthetic and philosophical In the first half of the book No offers a detailed examination of pictures and seeing writing and speech and choreography and dancing which serve as case studies and the base in which the phenomenon of entanglement is set In later chapters No deepens this analysis by exploring the nature of the aesthetic itself and its place in our lives examining what the entanglement can teach us about science and in particular the project of applying science in the domain of the human In these later chapters he covers a range of topics including sex gender and the body psychology and AI the problem of style and the nature of nature Drawing on his work in perception consciousness and the philosophy of art No offers a new model for thinking about the nature of the human the limits to what a natural science of the human can do on its own and the irreplaceable importance of art and philosophy for the larger project of studying and understanding ourselves
