Crossroads Between Culture and Mind Gustav Jahoda, 1993 The relationship between mind and culture has become a prominent and fashionable issue in psychology during the last quarter of the twentieth century The conflict is between those who see the human mind as being generated from and an intimate part of culture and those usually termed cognitivists who view the mind as essentially separate from the environment Gustav Jahoda traces the historical origins of this conflict to demonstrate that thinkers preoccupation with the relationship between mind and culture is not new The salient issues began to crystallize three centuries ago in Europe in the form of two distinct traditions whose contrasting conceptions of human nature and the human mind still remain the focus of current debates. The dominant tradition was produced by the scientific approach that had proved so successful in the physical realm. This view associated with the Enlightenment holds that mind is an essential part of nature and subject to its fixed laws. As a result of the influence of external factors such as climate and ecology, mind creates culture but remains essentially unchanged. The opposite view, which dates back to Vico and was espoused by anti-Enlightenment thinkers, is that the mind is separate from nature, an entity that both creates and is extensively modified by culture in a constant cycle of mutual determination. The growing prestige of experimental psychology has led to a heated debate between supporters of the rival traditions: is psychology a science or a cultural discipline? Jahoda identifies the current form of this debate as but a phase in psychology's long fascination with the role that culture plays in the formation of the mind, which has led to the recent emergence of cultural psychology. Crossroads between Culture and Mind is a formidable achievement by one of Europe's most distinguished and erudite psychologists.

Oriental Elements of Culture in the Occident Georg Jacob, 1903 The Construction and Contestation of Homosexual Identities in Contemporary Popular Culture Christoph Rosenthal, 2015-06-08

Essay from the year 2013 in the subject Sociology Relationships and Family London School of Economics language English abstract

Where the popular meets culture, a rich repository of oppositional voices versus hegemonic narratives evolves through representations, images, and media discourses. Embedded in commercial networks of cultural production and distribution, popular culture is indicative of societal macro-spheres and therefore resembles a fruitful realm for studying the construction and contestation of identities. The omnipresence of sexual identity conflicts in popular culture, such as Bollywood movies, can be interpreted as a manifestation of identity crises in postmodern society. These crises reflect wider societal processes of change and progress that can give individuals the feeling of being thrown out of joint. Minority groups, such as homosexuals, are especially exposed, which is why it is crucially important to further advance related knowledge and inform associated current debates around the question: What is popular culture, and how does it serve as a site of struggle around the construction and contestation of sexual identity? In an attempt to shed light on these highly relevant and prevailing questions, the present essay is structured in the following way: After untangling the complexities of how popular culture serves as a representational, mediated space where identities are constructed, contested, and negotiated, Bollywood cinema will be available for a comprehensive case study of how different homosexual identity disputes are situated within cinematographic representations. Comparing national and diasporic audiences shows that culture is a powerful mediator exerting influence over how certain media texts are negotiated. The main argumentative conclusions propose that the construction and contestation of sexual identities is an individually unique, culture-specific, and constantly evolving process unfolding at the intersection of macro and micro levels.
