Digging Through Darkness Chronicles Of An Archaeologist:

Digging Through Darkness Carmel Schrire,1995 In Digging through Darkness Carmel Schrire interweaves art and fact to recreate a distant world She combines autobiography historical archaeology and fictional reconstructions to explore the roots and consequences of colonial conquest in Africa Australia and the Pacific The book takes its unique shape from Schrire's intimate connection with her subject she is a native white South African the Jewish descendant of a colonist who arrived at the Cape of Good Hope over a hundred years ago Tracking the broad sweep of European expansion into Africa Australia and the Pacific Schrire focuses on the evidence unearthed in archaeological sites leading the reader through a wealth of strata and artifacts to see how inferences may be drawn from heaps of broken bones and stones These findings are then interwoven with historical sources to present an integrated picture of the past When evidence is insufficient to propel the inference the author constructs a fictional account inventing scenes that relate archaeological sites to historical documents This interweaving gives voice not only to the literate colonists but also to illiterate native people who endured dispossession in silence

Digging Through Darkness Carmel Schrire,1995 This chronicle links the personal history of Carmel Schrire the daughter of a Jewish household in Cape Town to her experiences as an archaeologist Schrire provides a mirror on pre colonial and colonial society as it can be deciphered in archaeological remains

English in Africa ,1997 Landscapes and Learning Margaret Somerville,Kerith Power,Phoenix de Carteret,2009 Places are made after their stories Just as place names describe complex and conflicted place making aspirations so with all marks associated with the marking of places tracks the symbolic representation of these in song dance and poetic speech indeed all the technologies that join up distances into narratives they all inscribe the earth's surface with the forms of stories. Of course these are not the same as the foundational myths of imperial cultures whose aim is to displace any prior discourse of place making. They are stories of and as journeys, passages in a double sense constitutionally incomplete because they always await their completion in the act of crossing over or meeting, which of course is endless. Paul Carter, Landscapes and Learning maps some of these stories and passageways to open up new place making possibilities. The book uses the lens of place to explore how we can respond differently to some of the major questions of our time. Postcolonial global concerns such as increased displacement and migration, the loss of indigenous knowledges and the imperatives of environmental degradation and climate change require critical educational responses. Place studies provides new languages and fresh metaphors to open up interdisciplinary conversations in the space between local and global and indigenous and non-indigenous knowledges. Through its focus on the mutual constitution of bodies, identities, histories, spaces and places, place studies offers a conceptual tool for important cultural and environmental transformations.

Dangerous Girls and Gentle Ladies Eleanor Conlin Casella, 1999. This inquiry explores material expressions of gendered power relations through excavation and analysis of the Ross Female Factory, the last remaining prison site to retain archaeological deposits related to the nineteenth century female convicts. It first examines the construction and maintenance of social hierarchies and institutional domination within the cultural landscape of the Ross Factory. Through the elaboration of physical boundaries, intensification of surveillance, increasing specialization of spaces and meticulous temporal and spatial regulation of inhabitants' movements, it interprets markers of social hierarchy and disciplinary control. This dissertation then considers the reciprocal dynamics of transgression and insubordination through the frequency and distribution of illicit objects within wards of the Ross prison. Archaeological Review from Cambridge, 2007.
