

CREATIVITY AND ITS EDUCATIONAL IMPLICATIONS¹ FOR THE GIFTED

E. Paul Torrance²

After studying, experimenting, exploring, talking, and writing for over ten years about the educational implications of creativity for the gifted, it would seem that I should be able to set forth these implications clearly and neatly. In fact, I have been looking forward to doing this.

Now, I find the task an impossible one. As I sat down to look back at the work of the past ten years, no such encompassing synthesis would come. Instead, new and incomplete but exciting and absorbing ideas possessed me. I kept trying to fight them off and started to list the implications of one of my earliest findings concerning the identification of the creatively gifted (Torrance, 1962): if one uses only an intelligence test and thereby identifies the upper twenty percent as gifted, he would miss seventy percent of those who would be identified as falling in the top twenty percent on tests of creative thinking ability. In spite of many attempts by high status authorities in several fields to explain this fact away, it remains virtually unchanged. The seventy percent figure is surprisingly constant in hundreds of studies, at different age levels, in different subcultures, using different tests of intelligence, and with different measures of creative thinking ability. Educators have not yet dared to dream of even the most obvious implications of this single finding. In fact, I found my own mind blocked and unwilling to continue my listing of implications.

Suddenly, I realized that my predicament was a very predictable one. Creativity is something infinite and its possibilities can never be exhausted! Finally, I relaxed and allowed five of the most persistent and urgent of the implications that kept fighting for expression to take possession of me. Then, I became afraid.

I know that these implications will not be widely accepted. At best, I can formulate them only incompletely. In expressing these implications at a meeting like this, I invite new criticism, ridicule, slander, and further excommunication from the scientific fraternity of educational researchers.

I have been toying with these five ideas for several years, however, and they will not let me alone. Therefore, I give them to you incomplete, only partially tested, and controversial.

NECESSARY TO LOOK TO CREATIVELY GIFTED DISADVANTAGED

I am especially hesitant to express the most persistent and urgent of the implications that have possessed me. For some time, I have been experiencing a dawning realization that in the future we shall
