Where there is conflict, there is power; where there is power, control; and where there is control, criminality. This talk introduces Conflict, Crime and Criminology: An Interdisciplinary Approach (forthcoming 2026), which uses conflict as a lens to explore crime, its definition, and control. Combining insights from criminology, psychology, sociology, politics, and philosophy, it links the psycho-social, cultural, and economic dimensions of conflict to crime. Structured as a quasi-bildungsroman, the book follows a criminologist's 30-year journey through topics such as drugs, domestic violence, organized crime, technopolicing, dissent, and ecocide, tracing criminology's evolution up to the post-Covid-19 era. The seminar will explore how legal instruments function as tools of power and control through the concept of "Rule with Law."
