CREST OF THE CONTINENT:

A RECORD OF

A SUMMER'S RAMBLE IN THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS AND BEYOND.

BY ERNEST INGERSOLL.

"We climbed the rock-built breasts of earth!
We saw the snowy mountains rolled
Like mighty billows; saw the birth
Of sudden dawns; beheld the gold
Of awful sunsets; saw the face
Of God, and named it boundless space."

illustrated 1885 edition Excerpt such a name asks the Madame The gap it is thereupon explained is a noble gateway thirty miles west of Del Norte through which the Rio Grande breaks out of the confinement of its youth in the San Juan mountains and I heard only yesterday how it come by its name from the great and good Judge Jones whose narratives most happily combine both facts and fancies You will remember what we heard of the band of men who went into the San Juan mines four and twenty years ago under Colonel Baker Well there was a part of that story you have not heard yet It seems that the party was composed of Northern and of Southern men in nearly equal numbers When they heard that war had broken out between the Northern States and the hoped for Confederacy there was added to the woe of disappointment diminished food and the fear of Indians the bitterness of a little civil war among those who previously had been compatriots and friends It was a miserable little copy of the great struggle but it resulted in disproportionate sorrows for a panic ensued in which the men of the party broke up and scattered out of the mountains by every available passage a prey to double the dangers which would have menaced them had they stayed together Some tried to take their wagons out piecemeal over Cunningham Pass Putting them together on the eastern side they worked their way down to Del Norte Fort Garland and so to Santa Fe or around to Denver But they often broke down and a relic of this panic stricken flight in the shape of a large wagon wheel found by Judge Jones served to give the place its peculiar name To distinguish it from other gaps in the range it was spoken of as the gap

Crest of the Continent - Colorado, Utah, New Mexico In 1895 Ernest Ingersoll,2010-04-01 Ernest Ingersoll famous 19th century travel writer set out to explore Colorado in the 1880s because it was wild and rough and caused exhilaration of the body and soul The result of his captivation by this American frontier was his 1885 work Crest of the Continent A Summer s Ramble in the Rocky Mountains and Beyond As a member of the 1874 Hayden Expedition Ingersoll became enthralled with this special land And although he wrote about mining ranching agriculture and other commerce of the time his descriptive style was a perfect match for the high Rockies and Colorado s awesome scenery restful health resorts and what is now Northern New Mexico and eastern Utah In Crest of the Continent Ingersoll brings the Colorado experience to life perhaps better than anyone else before or since with words and illustrations that record for all time what it was like to live in the Wild and majestically wonderful West Today s tourist and historian will find this reprint of Ingersoll s Crest of the Continent a very enjoyable book one that will be read and referred to often [The Exploration of Mt. Rinehart,2003-07-22 Over the years Colorado has attracted its share of literary vagabonds but none have described the state in such eloquent prose as those who visited the area during its early years Included in this volume are the impressions of eleven legendary writers from the hilarious diatribe of a young Rudyard Kipling to the extensive narrative of a mature Walt Whitman Whether with Horace Greeley in the new born city of Denver touring William Palmer s Glen Eyrie with English women s rights advocate Emily Faithfull or on the trail with Zane Grey outside of Meeker these essays provide a first hand look at Colorado as it progressed
