Competition Policy Analysis Kai Hüscherlath, 2008-09-08 Competition policy is an integral and prominent part of economic policy making in the European Union The EU Treaty prescribes its member states to conduct economic policy in accordance with the principle of an open market economy with free competition More precisely the goal of EU competition policy is to defend and develop effective competition in the common market European Commission 2000 7 Under its Commissioners van Miert Monti and most recently Kroes the EU Commission has stepped up its effort to pursue and achieve the aforementioned goal A number of so called hard core cartels such as the notorious vitamin cartel led by Roche have been detected tried in violation of Art 81 of the Maastricht Accord and punished with severe fines Also Microsoft was hit hard by the strong hand of the Commission having been severely fined for exploiting a dominant market position Economic analysis has been playing an increasingly significant role in the Commission's examination of competition law cases This holds true in particular for merger control Here however the Commission has had to accept some poignant defeats in court such as the Court's reversals of Airtours First Choice or GE Honeywell Among other things the European Court of Justice found the economic analysis as conducted by the EU's Directorate General for Competition to be flawed and the conclusions drawn not to be convincing These rejections by the courts have stirred up the scholarly debate on the conceptual foundations of European competition policy designed to give a general view of the competition policy followed during the past year In 1996 as a result of the globalization of trade and the internationalization of economic phenomena there continued to be a considerable need for adjustment of the structures of the European economy In a rapidly changing world environment characterized by four main factors the speeding up of technical and scientific progress population growth in the developing countries the increase in the production of goods and services and the intensification of trade in goods and of capital movements the policy of the European Union and more particularly Community competition policy seeks to promote the indispensable adaptation of the Community economy to this new situation Globalization is in many respects an opportunity to be seized by those economies which have the means to do so The liberalization of trade both worldwide and within the single market is a mainspring of growth that will benefit the European economy European businesses and European consumers For all that globalization is also sometimes seen as a threat by European citizens faced with a society which they perceive as being more complex the more global it becomes less safe the more prosperous it grows and more fragile the more open it is These concerns are understandable They are legitimate They must be accommodated by government policies and especially by Community policy They reflect the mounting uncertainties for both structures and individuals that stem from the need to adapt to a rapidly changing world Economic Analysis and Policy, 1995
