The Topography of Ancient Idalion and its Territory Stephan G. Schmid, Will M. Kennedy, 2024-06-18 The question of how to define the territories of the ancient polities city kingdoms of Iron Age Cyprus is a fascinating but also a very difficult one While this topic has already been widely explored by previous scholarship recent investigations that include both modern approaches such as the application of landscape archaeological methodologies as well as a re evaluation of the available archaeological evidence from a new perspective now offers a fresh take on such questions A workshop organized in Berlin in 2018 aimed at discussing additional information on the topography of the ancient city of Idalion and its hinterland This volume therefore includes unique contributions that deal with a wide array of relevant aspects They provide new information on the location chronology and character of settlements necropoleis and sanctuaries from the wider area of Idalion and discuss important issues such as the continuity or discontinuity of settlement activities from the Late Bronze Age to the Iron Age and how this is reflected by material culture They address questions concerned with the physical control of territories and communication networks by considering Idalion s resource availability and the overall development of its rural settlement pattern in contrast to that of its neighbouring polities

The History of the American Expedition Fighting the Bolsheviks: Campaigning in North Russia 1918-1919 Joel R. Moore, Harry H. Mead, 1920-01-01 Someone Blunders About Medicine Stores Spanish Influenza At Sea And No Medicine Improvised Hospitals At Time Of Landing Getting Results In Spite Of Red Tape Raising Stars And Stripes To Hold The Hospital Aid Of American Red Cross Doughboys Dislike British Hospital Starting American Receiving Hospital Blessings On The Medical Men At Stoney Castle camp in England inquiry by the Americans had elicited statement from the British authorities that each ship would be well supplied with medicines and hospital equipment for the long voyage into the frigid Arctic But it happened that none were put on the boat and all that the medical officers had to use were three or four boxes of medical supplies that they had clung to all the way from Camp Custer Before half the perilous and tedious voyage was completed the dreaded Spanish influenza broke out on three of the ships On the Somali which is typical of the three ships every available bed was full on the fifth day out at sea Congestion was so bad that men with a temperature of only 101 or 102 degrees were not put into the hospital but lay in their hammocks or on the decks To make matters worse on the eighth day out all the flu medicines were exhausted It was a frantic medical detachment that paced the decks of those three ships for two days and nights after the ships arrived in the harbor of Archangel while preparations were being made for the improvisation of hospitals On the 6th of September they debarked in the rain at Bakaritzza About thirty men could be accommodated in the old Russian Red Cross Hospital such as it was dirt and all The remainder were temporarily put into old barracks What flu weakened soldier will ever forget those double decked pine board beds sans mattress sans linen sans pillows If lucky a man had two blankets He could not take off his clothes Death stalked gauntly through and many a man died with his boots on in bed The glory of dying in France to lie under a field of poppies had come to this drear mystery of dying in Russia under a dread disease in a strange and unlovely place Nearly a hundred of them died and the wonder is that more men did not die What stamina and courage the American soldier showed to recover in those first dreadful weeks No attempt is made to fasten blame for this upon the American medical officers nor upon the British for that matter Many a soldier though was wont to wish that Major Longley had not himself been nearly dead of the disease when the ships arrived To the credit of Adjutant Kiley Captains Hall Kinyon Martin and Greenleaf and Lieutenants Lowenstein and Danzinger and the enlisted medical men let it be said that they performed prodigies of labor trying to serve the sick men who were crowded into the five hastily improvised hospitals The big American Red Cross Hospital receiving hospital at the base was started at Archangel November 22nd by Captain Pyle under orders of Major Longley The latter had been striving for quite a while to start a separate receiving hospital for American wounded but had been blocked by the British medical authorities in Archangel They declared that it was not feasible as the Americans had no equipment supplies or medical personnel However the officer in charge of the American Red Cross force in Archangel offered to supply the needed things either by purchasing them from the stores of British medical supplies in Archangel or by sending back to England for them It is said that the repeated letters of Major Longley to SOS in England somehow were always tangled in the British and American red tape in going through military channels At last Major Longley took the bull by the horns and accepted the aid of the Red Cross and selected and trained a personnel to run the hospital from among the officers and men who had been wounded and were recovered or partially recovered and were not fit for further heavy duty on the fighting line He had the valuable assistance also of the two American Red Cross nurses Miss Foerster and Miss Gosling the former later being one of five American women who for services in the World War were awarded the Florence Nightingale Medal On September 10th we opened the first Red Cross Hospital which was also used in connection with the Russian Red Cross Hospital and was served by Russian Red Cross nurses Captain Hall and Lieutenant Kiley were in charge of the hospital A few days later an infirmary was opened for the machine gunners and Company C of the engineers at Solombola A good story goes in connection with this piece of history of the little Red Cross hospital on Troitsky near Olga barracks There had been rumor and more or less open declaration of the British medical authorities that the Americans would not be permitted to start a hospital of their own in Archangel The Russian sisters who owned the building were interested observers as to the outcome of this clash in authority It was settled one morning about ten o'clock in a spectacular manner much to the satisfaction of the Americans and Russians Captain Wynn of the American Red Cross came to the assistance of Captain Hall supplying the American flag and helping raise it over the building and dared the British to take it down Then he supplied the hospital with beds and linen and other supplies and comfort bags for the men dishes etc This little hospital is a haven of rest that appears in the dreams today of many a doughboy who went through those dismal days of the first month in Archangel There they got American treatment and as far as possible food cooked in American style In October the number of sick and wounded men was so large that another hospital for the exclusive use of convalescents was opened in an old Russian sailor's home in the near vicinity of American Headquarters The History of the American Expedition Fighting the Bolsheviki Joel Roscoe Moore,1920 Military Review ,1987 American Journal of Archaeology ,1905 Professional Journal of the United States Army ,1987 The American Museum Journal ,1911 Scientific American ,1894 Papers of the Peabody Museum of American Archaeology and Ethnology, Harvard University ,1922 Review of Current Military Literature ,1987 Guide to the Materials for American History, to 1783 Charles McLean Andrews,1912 Annual Report of the American Museum of Natural History American Museum of Natural History,1891 Annual Report ...
