The Education of Migrant Children and China's Future Holly H. Ming, 2013-12-17 There are more than 225 million rural to urban migrant workers and some 20 million migrant children in Chinese cities Because of policies related to the household registration hukou system migrant students are not allowed a public high school education in the cities so their urban education stops abruptly at the end of middle school This book investigates the post middle school education and labor market decisions of migrant students in Beijing and Shanghai and provides a glimpse into the future of a crucial link in China's development The stories of how these migrant students seek upward mobility and urban citizenship also reveal one of the most intricate structural inequalities in China today Based on quantitative data collected from middle schools in Beijing and Shanghai and ethnographic data drawing on in depth interviews with migrant children their parents and teachers this book offers a portrait of the migration and educational experiences and prospects of second generation migrant youth in China today It explores the urban experience of migrant students contrasting it with that of local city youngsters examining the migrant students family backgrounds family dynamics neighborhood and school experience and interaction with locals It goes on to look at the migrant students education and career aspirations the structural obstacles preventing their fulfilment and how migrant families respond to institutional constraints on educational opportunity Finally the book concludes with a discussion of policy implications and offers proposals for resolving the dilemmas of migrant youth This book will of great interest to students and scholars of Chinese studies Asian education migration and social development

China's One-Child Policy and Multiple Caregiving Esther Goh,2011-05-18 This book explores the effects of China s one child policy on modern Chinese families It is widely thought that such a policy has contributed to the creation of a generation of little emperors or little suns spoiled by their parents and by the grandparents who have been recruited to care for the child while the middle generation goes off to work Investigating what life is really like with three generations in close quarters and using urban Xiamen as a backdrop the author shows how viewing the grandparents and parents as engaged in an intergenerational parenting coalition allows for a more dynamic understanding of both the pleasures and conflicts within adult relationships particularly when they are centred around raising a child Based on both survey data and ethnographic fieldwork the book also makes it clear that parenting is only half the story The children of course are the other Moreover these children not only have agency but constantly put it to work as a way to displace the burden of expectations and steady attention that comes with being an only child in contemporary urban China These lone tacticians as Goh calls them are not having an easy time and not all are living like spoiled children The reality is far more challenging for all three generations The book will be of interest to those in family studies education psychology sociology Asian Studies and social work
