America's Schools and the Mass Media Everette E. Dennis,Craig L. LaMay,1993-01-01 Any quotation dictionary that includes an entry for education provides ample testimony that education is more than schools From Aristotle to Oscar Wilde come warnings that education is no substitute for experience Indeed for some critics of schooling we learn that formal education is antithetical to learning America s Schools and the Mass Media

collectively explore the contents of mass media and how it shapes educational programming and policy making The editors claim that American schooling for the past forty years has less to do with a learning agenda and pedagogy than with economic competition and national security The editors and contributors to this important volume contend that American public schooling has historical roots as a crucible for democratic government This ideal has not only grown increasingly suspect in recent years but is now commonly assailed as a brake on both economic growth and intellectual excellence The editors ask what minimum skills and knowledge one must possess in order to participate in the life of the nation if not in the life of the mind The essays by Gerald Grant Bella Rosenberg Charles T Salmon Joan Richardson and Susan Tifft take direct aim at this issue with surprising but stimulating results The volume begins with Myron Lieberman's law to wit the more important an educational question the less people know about it The remainder of the contributions aim to begin removing this law with a more salutary understanding The twelve essays that constitute the work deal with the interplay of educational and media institutions what students learn and how they learn it with a special emphasis on the long and questionable history of corporate special interest and government attempts to shape the beliefs of future citizens and present consumers The volume closes with a full scale effort to review the nation's educational priorities and how questions of school choice are entwined with those of media choice Life and Labor ,1919 Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature ,1922
