

Federation

PROS

- The Federation promotes unity and cohesion amongst the states or regions by creating a common interest, a shared identity, and a sense of belonging.
- It provides a standardization of laws, policies, and regulations which eliminates any form of discrimination or biasness.
- Federal government is more capable of dealing with international issues.
- Federal government is better equipped to handle national emergencies.

CONS

- One of the disadvantages is that a central government can become too powerful, reducing the autonomy of the self-governing states or regions, thereby undermining the federal principles.
- Divisions between the central authority and the self-governing regions could lead to delays in decision-making, inefficiencies, and conflicts, which could impact the overall functioning of the government.
- Fiscal disparities between states or regions could impede on the general welfare and development of the Federation as a whole.
