Artificial Liver Support:

Artificial Liver Support G. Brunner, F. W. Schmidt, 2012-12-06 The regenerative capacity of the liver cell is almost unlimited Therefore after acute liver damage be it viral toxic hypoxic or surgical in origin restitutio ad integrum is the usual outcome In two forms of liver disease however this is not the case in fulminant hepatic failure liver regeneration often is not fast enough to keep the organism alive in end stage cirrhosis regeneration is disturbed by a hypertrophic architecture of fibrotic tissue For these extreme forms of liver disease and for critical situations before and after liver surgery artificial liver support is needed This book contains the latest results in this area of research presented by scientists from all over the world at an international symposium held in Celle Germany June 2 4 1980 Exciting new methods like continuous membrane plasma separation and liver cell transplantation into the spleen have been developed The older methods of hemoperfusion and dialysis have been improved Enzymological methods and liver transplantation have made good progress We hope that this volume will help the clinician in his decision making and stimulate ingenious new research for the benefit of our liver patients

Artificial Liver Support G. Brunner, M. Mito, 1993-01-11 Continuing progress has been made since the first edition of Artificial Liver Support was published Liver transplantation has however become an established therapy for a relatively small number of patients who remain patients for life There therefore continues to be a great need for the development of other forms of artificial liver support Improved intensive care utilizing improved plasma exchange dialysis sclerotherapy and intracranial pressure monitoring have improved survival in fulminant hepatic failure Progress has also been made in lipid membrane detoxification in cell cultures and in cell transplantation and the isolation of various liver cell growth factors has led to deep insight into the mechanisms of liver regeneration This book gives the clinician and the researcher detailed information about established new methods of clinic work and laboratory research and describes new experimental approaches indicating the direction of future research G BRUNNER M Mito Preface to the First Edition The regenerative capacity of the liver cell is almost unlimited Therefore after acute liver damage be it viral toxic hypoxic or surgical in origin restitutio ad integrum is the usual outcome In two forms of liver disease however this is not the case in fulminant hepatic failure liver regeneration often is not fast enough to keep the organism alive in end stage cirrhosis regeneration is disturbed by a hypertrophic architecture of fibrotic tissue For these extreme forms of liver disease and for critical situations before and after liver surgery artificial liver support is needed Artificial Liver Support Gorig

Lanza, William L. Chick, 2013-12-01 The concept of using encapsulation for the immunoprotection of transplanted cells was introduced for the first time in the 1960s Microencapsulated cells might be protected from destruction and from participation in immunological processes while the enclosing membrane would be permeable to small molecules of specific cellular product which could then enter the general extracellular compartment of the recipient For instance encapsulated endocrine cells might survive and maintain an effective supply of hormone Chang Ph D Thesis McGill University 1965 Chang et al Can J Physiol Pharmacol 44:115-128, 1966 We asked Connaught Laboratories Ltd in Toronto to put this concept into practice In 1980 Lim and Sun from Connaught Laboratories reported on the successful implantation of poly I lysine alginate encapsulated rat islets into a foreign host Lim and Sun Science 210:908-909, 1980 Now many groups around the world are making tremendous progress in the encapsulation of a multitude of cell types Kiihtreiber Lanza and Chick have invited many cell encapsulation groups from around the world to contribute to this book The result is a very useful reference book in this rapidly growing area With so many excellent authors describing in detail the different areas of cell encapsulation my role here will be to briefly discuss a few points
