

INTRODUCTION TO GENETIC ENGINEERING

- Biotechnology deals with techniques of using live organisms or enzymes from organisms to produce products and processes useful to humans.
- In this sense, making curd, bread or wine, which are all microbe-mediated processes, could also be thought as a form of biotechnology.
- Further, many other processes/techniques are also included under biotechnology. For example, in vitro fertilisation leading to a 'test-tube' baby, synthesising a gene and using it, developing a DNA vaccine or correcting a defective gene, are all part of biotechnology.

PRINCIPLES OF BIOTECHNOLOGY

- Among many, the two core techniques that enabled birth of modern biotechnology are :
  - (i) GENETIC ENGINEERING : Techniques to alter the chemistry of genetic material (DNA and RNA), to introduce these into host organisms and thus change the phenotype of the host organism
  - (ii) BIOPROCESS ENGINEERING: Maintenance of sterile (microbial contamination-free) ambience in chemical engineering processes to enable growth of only the desired microbe/eukaryotic cell in large quantities for the manufacture of biotechnological products like antibiotics, vaccines, enzymes,

- (i) Development of genetic engineering, which includes creation of recombinant DNA, use of gene cloning and gene transfer, insertion of the recombinant DNA into an organism and detection and use of a set of desirable genes within a genetically recombinant organism for the target response.
- (ii) Range of applications, which is responsible for various applications. Examples for the application of recombinant DNA are as follows: a) growth of insulin in the context of a microorganism which has a growth response to various range of applications. This is done when a desired gene is inserted into the range of applications, so that the microorganism of DNA can replicate and multiply itself in the host organism. This can also be called as cloning or making another identical copy of the recombinant DNA.
