to the Chinese people's historical background and to the environment in which they live. During the last few decades the development of international food trade and the extensive urbanisation process which have affected life styles to a large extent in many parts of the world have resulted in a sizeable decrease in the consumption of some kinds of traditional foods and a relative neglect in the cultivation of traditional food crops. Some traditional foods had withered away or are withering away. In recent years as a result of food globalisation the consumption of traditional foods has increased considerably and many of these foods are concurrent with easy to prepare processed, semi processed and high tech foods. It was decided therefore that a book should be carried out to document existing Chinese traditional foods in China and to assess their nutritional value and contribution to the diet. Among many new works on food however few studies address the Chinese foodways despite their enormous and continual influence on local food habits around the world. Even classic works on Chinese food provide us with only basic information about China itself or interpret Chinese foodways in the restricted local food scene and within Chinese history. This new book however provides an up to date reference for traditional Chinese foods and a detailed background of history, quality assurance and the manufacture of general traditional food products. It contains topics not covered in similar books.
