psychology's oldest fields personality assessment is one of the most extensively studied subsets of contemporary psychology. The Oxford Handbook of Personality Assessment synthesizes new and existing literature with clinical practice to provide a comprehensive volume on contemporary personality assessment including its historical developments, underlying methods, applications, contemporary issues, and assessment techniques. This handbook, part of the Oxford Library of Psychology, addresses both the historical roots of personality assessment and the evolution of its contemporary methodological tenets, thus providing a foundation for the handbook's other innovative focus: the application of personality assessment in clinical, personnel, and forensic assessments. With a wealth of respected international contributors and unequalled breadth of content, the Oxford Handbook of Personality Assessment offers an authoritative and field-encompassing resource for researchers and clinicians from across the medical, health, and psychology disciplines, i.e., clinical psychology, psychiatry, and social work, and would be an ideal text for any graduate course on the topic of personality assessment.

I and Thou Stephen Gislason, 2017-11-02

I and Thou focuses on intimate relationships. Innate tendencies are hard at work when people meet, become lovers, and end with arguments and fighting. The same tendencies determine how family members interact and explain why so many families are dysfunctional. When lovers form an enduring pair bond, they often become parents, and everything changes. Humans seek bonding with others, are distressed when they become isolated, and bond to each other in several ways. The most enduring bonds are kin-related, based on closely shared genes. The deepest bonding occurs when mother and infant are together continuously from birth, and mother breast feeds the infant. Bonds among family members are the most enduring. Bonds to friends, lovers, and spouses are the next most significant. Bonds to colleagues, neighbors, and even strangers that are admired from a distance are next. Friendships are often temporary bonds based on the need to affiliate with others for protection, social status, feeding, sex, and fun. Success in business and professions is dependent on affiliations with others. Success depends on what you know, on who you know, and how well you are regarded. Affiliations are ephemeral and must be maintained by regular contact, grooming, food sharing, expressions of conformity and concern, and exchange of gifts and favors. Trust is established over time by regular and reliable maintenance of affiliation. The strongest connections are maintained by grooming, eating, and sleeping together. Social conventions rely on bonding. Descriptions such as love, affection, friendship, loyalty, duty, faith, and obligation refer to affiliation and bonding. Humans' groups employ bonding strategies, intentionally initiating new members into the group with rituals, secrets, symbols, costumes, and codes that distinguish members from non-members. Groups emphasize special privileges given to members and resist attempts of outsiders to enjoy these privileges. The most celebrated bonding is described as falling in love and occurs between individuals who are not related. The experience of falling in love is a complex of feelings, emotions, perceptions, and cognition designed to bring two people together in a tight, exclusive bond that supports reproduction. The essential feature of falling in love is a fascination with another person, coupled with a drive to be with them and to protect them. Men often idealize their loved one.
