The Language of Marginality and Subjectivity in a Global Context Roberta Piazza, Helen Ringrow, Sergio Maruenda-Bataller, Carmen Gregori-Signes, 2026-02-05 This book expands and deepens the investigation of the language associated with or produced by groups that are socially culturally racially and economically outliers and whose marginalisation results in a different engagement with and participation in mainstream society's activities It features case studies from across the globe including Ghana Norway Poland Saudi Arabia South Africa and Zambia addressing the construction and self construction of marginalisation and diversity in discourse and society bringing to light many unheard and hidden voices and perspectives The 14 chapters explore a wide range of forms of marginalisation and diversity as global issues that have an impact on societies worldwide in terms of exclusion in the guise of non participation in mainstream society's activities and contestation in different international contexts The contributions in the book capture how vulnerable individuals and groups occupying the in between spaces of marginality navigate through them and construct themselves as dissenting and diverse how they are aware of their condition at a certain point in time and how they are able to reflect resourcefully on it Aspiration to a safe place away from the street for individuals at risk of rough sleeping can find an echo in the desire to escape the oppression of a despotic regime that limits Saudi women's freedom On the contrary cases of negative self exclusion are exemplified by the language of Men's Rights Activists who critical of society's oppression of men engage in a condemnation of women and feminism In both cases there is a conflict between periphery of society and mainstream although the language of the excluded still engages with the hegemonic society in a form of intrinsic contestation

The Global Challenge and Marginalization Márcio Moraes Valença, 2008 Marginality is often seen as a reflection of division in which there is an unequal relationship of economic and political power between two extremes In this way it is a common thing to find oppositional couples like North South Rich Poor Homogenous Heterogenous Centre Periphery Inclusion Exclusion Developed Underdeveloped and New Old in much of the literature dealing with marginality These oppositions come about out of a socially and politically unbalanced society which is organised according to the differentiation of individuals in a hierarchical exclusionary fashion In this book there are 25 chapters written by 36 academics from 27 universities located in 14 countries and in 4 continents on this fascinating subject matter

Contesting Stereotypes and Creating Identities Andrew J. Fuligni, 2007-05-31 Since the end of legal segregation in schools most research on educational inequality has focused on economic and other structural obstacles to the academic achievement of disadvantaged groups But in Contesting Stereotypes and Creating Identities a distinguished group of psychologists and social scientists argue that stereotypes about the academic potential of some minority groups remain a significant barrier to their achievement This groundbreaking volume examines how low institutional and cultural expectations of minorities hinder their academic success how these stereotypes are perpetuated and the ways that minority students attempt to empower themselves by redefining their identities The contributors to Contesting Stereotypes and Creating Identities explore issues of ethnic identity and educational inequality from a broad range of disciplinary perspectives drawing on historical analyses social psychological experiments interviews and observation Meagan Patterson and Rebecca Bigler show that when teachers label or segregate students according to social categories even in subtle ways students are more likely to rank and stereotype one another so educators must pay attention to the implicit or unintentional ways that they emphasize group differences Many of the contributors contest John Ogbu s theory that African Americans have developed an oppositional culture that devalues academic effort as a form of acting white Daphna Oyserman and Daniel Brickman in their study of black and Latino youth find evidence that strong identification with their ethnic group is actually associated with higher academic motivation among minority youth Yet as Julie Garcia and Jennifer Crocker find in a study of African American female college students the desire to disprove negative stereotypes about race and gender can lead to anxiety low self esteem and excessive self defeating levels of effort which impede learning and academic success The authors call for educational institutions to diffuse these threats to minority students identities by emphasizing that intelligence is a malleable rather than a fixed trait

Contesting Stereotypes and Creating Identities reveals the many hidden ways that educational opportunities are denied to some social groups At the same time this probing and wide ranging anthology provides a fresh perspective on the creative ways that these groups challenge stereotypes and attempt to participate fully in the educational system The Journal of Oromo Studies ,2003

Producing and Contesting Urban Marginality Julie Cupples, Tom Slater, 2019-10-25 In Mexico City as in many other large cities worldwide contemporary modes of urban governance have overwhelmingly benefited affluent populations and widened social inequalities Disinvestment from social housing and rent seeking developments by real estate companies and land speculators have resulted in the displacement of low income populations to the urban periphery Public social spaces have been eliminated to make way for luxury apartments and business interests Low income neighbourhoods are often stigmatized by dominant social forces to justify their demolition The urban poor have however negotiated and resisted these developments in a range of ways This text explores these urban dynamics in Mexico City and beyond looking at the material and symbolic mechanisms through which urban marginality is produced and contested It seeks to understand how things might be otherwise how the city might be geared towards more inclusive forms of belonging and citizenship The History of Discrimination in U.S. Education E. Tamura, 2008-02-15 How have power and agency been revealed in educational issues involving minorities More specifically how have politicians policymakers practitioners and others in the mainstream used and misused their power in relation to those in the margins How have those in the margins asserted their agency and negotiated their way within the larger society What have been the relationships not only between those more powerful and those less powerful but also among those on the fringes of society How have people sought to bridge the gap separating those in the margins and those in the mainstream The essays in this book respond to these questions by delving into the educational past to reveal minority issues involving ethnicity gender class disability and sexual identity
