

Late Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries

Three revolutions—the Industrial Revolution, which began in Britain about 1780; the American Revolution in 1776; and the French Revolution in 1789—marked the period of great social and technological change we call the modern age. The Industrial Revolution brought about the most significant shift in the way people lived since the Neolithic agricultural revolution one thousand years earlier. Since the start of the Industrial Revolution, technological change has occurred at an ever increasing rate.

The Enlightenment, or Age of Reason, in the eighteenth century has been called, was characterized by a shift to a more rational and scientific approach to religious, political, social, and economic issues. Belief in the importance of liberty, self-determination, and progress brought about an emphasis on democracy and secular concerns. Citizens held power that resulted in early the use of water power became increasingly important. Traditional values were challenged by the new atmosphere of independent investigation, by the radical changes brought about by technology and by the increased mixing of peoples and cultures. Science both inspired and directed these changes.

In art, a new self-consciousness about style led to increasing uncertainty about the place of art and artists in society. In earlier periods, within each society, artists had adhered to one dominant style.

Following the French Revolution and the subsequent break with traditional art patronage in France, a variety of other developed simultaneously. Artists were freed from the serious commissions imposed by their traditional patrons (nobles, aristocracy, wealthy merchants and bankers, and the church), but the new fell so strongly financially until a new genre of patronage emerged. The support that developed came in the form of commercial galleries, press and corporate collectors, and museums.

NEOCLASSICISM

With the beginning of the French Revolution in 1789, the luxurious life that reigned on the French court ended abruptly, and French society was disrupted and transformed. As the social structure and values changed, taste changed.

One of the men who led the way to revolution in both art and politics was painter Jacques-Louis David. Believing that the art should serve a public purpose in a state of social and governmental chaos, he argued what he saw in the Revolution (generally associated with the aristocratic Rococo style. What he painted came in two varieties. David used it to create style called Neoclassicism. Neoclassical refers to the revivals of classical Greece and Rome, much of the subject matter in Neoclassical art was Roman because Rome represented a republic, or republican form of government.

The values of honor and duty associated in a way of honor and the traditions in the for liberty, in which these brothers pledge to take the road offered by their father to defend Rome. With each offering, David gave revolutionary leaders an inspiring image of themselves seated in history. "This image," was the painting's message, "was never a table set and has been brought before."

David's Neoclassicism, seen in the rational, geometric structure of his compositions, provided strong contrast to the formal values of Rococo style. The painting has the quality of classical Greek Roman called sculptures, with strong side light emphasizing the figures in the foreground. Note the lack of the gestures are more the central making their way back. The three action are an emblem give strength to the design and provide an historically appropriate setting for the Roman by 1788. The two center columns represent the other major parts of the subject. "Moral and historical

The new classical idea is Neoclassical style was also full in collection. Neoclassical architecture shared neoclassical ideas for the first time with the work of historical sciences and scholars Thomas Jefferson. He argued strongly for the home movement, was based from Palladian Renaissance reappropriation of Roman architecture (see page 87). This, being the case in Europe as Minister to France (1795-1796), later art was strongly influenced by French, Italian, and Roman culture and art. This, when he returned to home between 1791 and 1800, he had the second more influence than the general of the building and more influence than a classical design. He reflected the a classical in classical form. He added a large Neoclassical period to provide and supported by national, making the more design reappropriation of the neoclassical (see page 88) by use of neoclassical French Neoclassical
