

CHILDREN'S CONCEPTIONS OF HEALTH, ILLNESS, DEATH AND THE ANATOMY OF THE HUMAN BODY

Iva ŽALOUĐÍKOVÁ

Abstract: This paper focuses on children's naïve, spontaneous conceptions and perceptions of the terms health, illness and death and their perceptions of the anatomy of the human body as important starting points for health education for children at the first level of primary school. It presents research on this issue conducted by authors in the Czech Republic and abroad, and the author's own investigation into conceptions of health and illness among children at the first level of primary schools in the Brno area. It also provides a comparison of scientific theories and children's perceptions and emphasises the necessity of understanding children's naïve conceptions in order for the teacher to induce conceptual change in the educational process.

Keywords: children's conceptions of health and illness, children's conceptions of death, anatomical conceptions, health education

Introduction

A number of fields, such as clinical psychology, social medicine, clinical branches of medicine, pedagogical psychology, developmental psychology, cognitive psychology, and specialist didactics, have taken an interest in the subjective interpretation of phenomena such as health and illness, death, life, health support, disease prevention, parts of the body, the human organs, etc. since the nineteen seventies and eighties.

The older current of research into the subjective conception of health and illness was generally performed by doctors and psychologists, and investigated the patient's perceptions and beliefs about illness, tending to place the emphasis on the affective aspect. The younger current, which has largely adopted the implicit theory of illness, has focused to a greater extent on the cognitive aspect of the issue. Research was initially devoted to explaining why patients do not co-operate with doctors and why they fail to observe their instructions during treatment. The reasons for this may have been the subjectively perceived seriousness of their medical state and the danger posed by it, and their subjective perception of the sensitivity and vulnerability of the organism.

Children's Conceptions of Death Richard Lonetto, 1980 Children's Understanding of Death Victoria Talwar, Paul L. Harris, Michael Schleifer, 2011-04-25 In order to understand how adults deal with children's questions about death we must examine how children understand death as well as the broader society's conceptions of death the tensions between biological and supernatural views of death and theories on how children should be taught about death This collection of essays comprehensively examines children's ideas about death both biological and religious Written by specialists from developmental psychology pediatrics philosophy anthropology and legal studies it offers a truly interdisciplinary approach to the topic The volume examines different conceptions of death and their impact on children's cognitive and emotional development and will be useful for courses in developmental psychology clinical psychology and certain education courses as well as philosophy classes especially in ethics and epistemology This collection will be of particular interest to researchers and practitioners in psychology medical workers and educators both parents and teachers

Children's Conceptions of Death and Dying as a Function of Cognitive Development Kevin Robert Loomis, 1982 Oxford Textbook of Palliative Care for Children Ann Goldman, Richard Hain, Stephen Liben, 2012-05-24 The first edition of this book was the first authoritative systematic and comprehensive text to define the increasingly important and evolving specialty of paediatric palliative care It explores both the clinical aspects and the multidimensional and holistic nature of care for the dying child based on the knowledge that all human experience has a physical emotional psychological and spiritual impact The book covers ways of providing support in all of these areas both for the child families and carers recognising the importance of teamwork and taking an evidence based approach The Oxford Textbook of Palliative Care for Children is about the care of children for whom cure of their underlying disease is not possible It encompasses the physical management of symptoms such as pain and nausea as well as social issues such as accessing appropriate education emotional issues such as techniques for communication and spiritual issues such as feelings of guilt and isolation The book suggests that if we are to maintain the quality of life for a child it is essential to recognise all these dimensions and try to address them This can only be done by recognising the skills of a wide range of professionals and working together in ways that are not always intuitive to any one discipline It explores the multidimensional and holistic nature of care for the dying child Those working in paediatric palliative care recognise that all human experience has emotional psychological and spiritual impact as well as physical and this book offers the essential information needed for those involved in paediatric care to find ways of providing support in all of these areas Comprehensive in scope exhaustive in detail and definitive in authority this second edition has been thoroughly updated to cover new practices current epidemiological data and the evolving models that support the delivery of palliative medicine to children Paediatric palliative care is now developing in countries with differing health care systems and being adapted to suit individual illnesses and the varying resources and geography in different parts of the world This book is
