Freedom and Consumerism Mark Davis, 2017-05-15 How does Bauman understand the concept of freedom and how does this understanding relate to the political traditions of conservatism liberalism and socialism Mark Davis offers a critical enquiry into the sociology of Zygmunt Bauman focusing on his English language writings from the 1960s onwards The book contributes to sociological debates about modern society by offering an interpretation of Bauman's work based on the concept of freedom especially in terms of his extensive consideration of consumerism Existing studies of Bauman have tended to focus uncritically upon other salient themes in his work notably culture power and socialism Davis repairs the lack of critical engagement in the literature by identifying freedom as a focus for critical reflection He also opens up new areas of discourse by analyzing Bauman's understanding of freedom in relation to the three great political traditions of conservatism liberalism and socialism This is an original contribution to discussions around Bauman's work which will be of interest to both sociologists and political theorists

Gender and the Political A. Third, 2014-10-23 Analyzing women labeled as terrorists in the United States in the late 1960s and early 1970s Gender and the Political examines Western cultural constructions of the female terrorist The chapters argue that the development of the discourse on terrorism evolves in parallel with and in response to radical feminism in the US during this time

Violent Depictions Susanna Scarparo, Sarah McDonald, 2006 Anything and everything may come under the rubric of violence in a society that is by and large addicted to the images of violence that are an inescapable part of contemporary reality In the wake of recent international events many have come to accept the perpetration of violence as morally acceptable and a just enterprise towards peace But what is violence How do we identify something or somebody as violent Is violence justifiable If so under what circumstances Violent Depictions addresses these and other questions on the role and nature of violence in a range of different national and historical contexts Violent Depictions is a reflection on the relationship between violence and representation and includes a number of thematic categories such as youth violence in films violence against women in literary and cinematic texts gendered representations of terrorism the violence of colonial encounters and of the remembering of institutionalised violence JAC ,2007 The Annual American Catalogue ... ,1901 The Cultivation of Whiteness Warwick P. Anderson,2002 In nineteenth century Australia the main commentators on race and biological differences were doctors The medical profession entertained serious anxieties about racial degeneration of the white population in the new land They feared non white races as reservoirs of disease and they held firm beliefs on the baneful influence of the tropics on the health of Europeans Gradually these matters became the province of public health and biological science In the 1930s anthropologists claimed race as their special interest The author examines the notion of whiteness as a flexible category in scientific and public debates Anderson also provides an account of experimentation in the 1920s and 1930s on Aboriginal people in the central deserts Draws on European and American work on the development of racial thought and on the history of representations of the body
