Babies' Sensory Development

Hearing 0-12 Months

Babies' hearing, although well developed at birth, can take up to around six months for them to hear clearly and understand different sounds due to the amount of fluid needing to clear from their ears after birth. However, as babies' brains develop, their hearing starts to tune in, intensify and recognise sounds from different distances. They also develop an awareness of pitch and volume.

From birth, babies:

- ▶ may pay close attention to sounds;
- ▶ respond to familiar voices, such as a caregiver's voice or a song;
- ▶ may startle and cry at loud, unexpected noises.

By 3 months, babies:

- ▶ become more receptive to different sounds;
- ▶ react or turn their head towards nearby sounds;
- ▶ may go quiet at the sound of something, even if it's out of sight;
- ▶ smile at a familiar adult voice.
