Performance Under Stress James Szalma,Peter A Hancock,2018-10-09 The world is a dangerous place and recent events have served to make it less safe There are many arenas of conflict and even combat across the world Such situations are the quintessential expression of stress you stand in imminent danger and live with the knowledge that you may be attacked injured or even killed at any moment How do people perform under these conditions How do they keep a heightened level of vigilance when nothing may happen in their immediate location for weeks or even months What happens when the bullets actually start flying How is it you distinguish friend from foe and each from innocent bystanders when in immediate peril of your life Can we design technology to help people make good decisions in these ultimately hazardous situations To what degree does your membership in a team act to dissipate these particular effects Can we generate sufficiently stressful field exercises to simulate these conditions and can we train and or select those most able to withstand such adverse conditions How will the next generation of servicemen deal with these inherent problems These are the sorts of questions that Performance Under Stress addresses This book is derived largely from a multiple year multiple university initiative MURI on stress and soldier performance on the modern electronic battlefield It involved leading researchers from many institutions who have brought their individual expertise to bear on these crucial contemporary concerns United by a common research framework these groups attacked the issue from different methodological and conceptual approaches ranging from traditional laboratory modeling and experimentation to realistic simulations from involved field exercises to personal experiences of actual combat conditions The insights generated have been distilled and presented as a benchmark of current understanding and provide future directions for research in this arena Although this work focuses on soldier stress and soldier performance the principles that are derived extend well beyond this single application Their findings can be applied to people facing the demands of the business world or research as much as to those who meet life or death situations such as homeland security first responders and law enforcement personnel Introduction to Psychology Pearson Custom Publishing, Sherri L. Understanding the Human Factor of the Energy Transition: Mechanisms Underlying Energy-Relevant Decisions and Behaviors Tobias Brosch, David Sander, Martin K. Patel, 2016-06-27 An increasing number of countries are shifting toward sustainable energy economies emphasizing the use of renewable energy sources increases in energy efficiency and the abatement of greenhouse gas emissions The success of such an energy transition will depend not only on the development of new energy technologies but also on major changes in the patterns of individual energy related decisions and behaviors resulting in substantial reductions in energy demand Consequently the behavioral sciences can make important contributions to the energy transition by increasing our understanding of the multiple factors and mechanisms that

underlie individual as well as group based decisions and behaviors in the energy domain and by creating a basis for systematic interventions that reduce energy usage Many different types of relevant behaviors and decisions need to be considered in this context including decisions to invest in energy efficient household equipment adjustments of energy critical habits related to heating eating or mode of transportation and participation in the political discourse related to questions of energy An integration of the expertise of the different disciplines of the behavioral sciences is thus needed to comprehensively investigate the impact of the different drivers and barriers that may determine energy related decisions and behaviors including economic factors such as price level social factors such as norms communication patterns and social learning processes and individual factors such as values attitudes beliefs heuristics affective biases and emotions The potential impact of these factors on the success of the energy transition is considerable for example a recent projection of the energy demand in Switzerland until 2050 has estimated the reduction potential related to psychological and sociological factors between 0% and 30% depending on which behavioral changes will be implemented in society Increased research efforts from the behavioral sciences are required to ensure that the full reduction potential can be achieved This Research Topic brings together contributions from different disciplines such as psychology affective science behavioral economics economics sociology consumer behavior business science sociology and political science that improve our understanding of the many factors underlying decision making and behavior in the energy domain and contribute to the development of targeted interventions that aim at reducing energy demand based on these factors

Introduction to Psychology from a Christian Worldview Shawn George,Rachel Piferi,Brian Kelley,2021-05-30 An introductory psychology textbook designed to familiarize students with the science and practice of psychology while also equipping them to critically analyse research and theory In addition the book also presents students with a Biblical foundation from which to evaluate research and grow in their understanding of human behaviour Plants, Animals, People, Aliens Marie I. George,2025-07-25 Aristotle famously maintains in his treatise On the Soul that there are three kinds of living things plants animals and humans and he speaks of each kind as having a soul St Thomas Aquinas adopts these same views Nowadays however many thinkers reject them on the grounds that they are incompatible with modern science Molecular biology is seen as affording a superior way of categorizing life forms Evolutionary biology appears to have established that humans are simply primates with adaptations somewhat different from other primates Plant physiology uncovering plants directional responses to a wide variety of different stimuli provides reason to think that plants sense light pressure odor pathogens etc in which case plants are simply non mobile animals similar to coral Neuroscience by showing the dependency of thought choice perception and emotion on the central nervous system especially on the brain seems to have eliminated any need to posit a soul Plants Animals People Aliens addresses these and a variety of other science based claims about living things by bringing Aristotelian Thomistic teachings to bear upon them While not a systematic work it both treats some of the most hotly debated philosophical questions concerning living things such as what it means to be alive as well as treating questions less often raised by philosophers such as whether animals have a theory of mind Though geared primarily to those conversant with the Aristotelian Thomistic tradition many of its key concepts are traced back to experiences that we all share in common thus rendering these concepts intelligible if not convincing to those with scientific and other backgrounds who are curious about this philosophical approach to living things The author strives to show how Aristotelian Thomistic philosophy and science complement one another by sketching out the fuller understanding of the living realm that the two together provide The book s final section considers the possibility and the likelihood that embodied rational beings exist elsewhere in our universe Here theological arguments drawn from the Christian faith are presented alongside philosophical and scientific arguments This section closes with a theological discussion of the disputed question of whether extraterrestrials were they to exist should be baptized
