Pathophysiology of the Blood-brain Barrier Barbro B. Johansson, Christer Owman, Håkan Widner, 1990 The blood brain barrier a concept including all morphological and functional mechanisms that restricts or facilitates the passage of substances from blood to brain enables the brain environment to be regulated relatively independently from concentration and fluctuations in plasma constituents The various aspects on the blood brain barrier have been extensively discussed in a number of recent symposia and our knowledge on the blood brain barrier physiology has advanced impressively during the last decade However as to the pathophysiology and the long term consequences of a transient or permanent barrier damage little is known a fact attributable to the limited amount of interest shown in this area of research until recently The idea to arrange a Fernstrom symposium on the consequences of barrier damage emerged in 1987 when findings in Barbro Johansson s Laboratory of Experimental Neurology indicated that opening of the blood brain barrier in various experimental models could lead to permanent neuronal injury

The Blood-Brain Barrier and Its Microenvironment Elga de Vries,Alexandre Prat,2005-08-24 This reference analyzes the cellular and molecular biology and mechanisms of the blood brain barrier BBB and presents the most recent studies on the role of the BBB in the development and initiation of a wide range of physiological and pathological conditions affecting the central nervous system

The Blood-Brain Barrier in Health and Disease William G. Mayhan,Denise M. Arrick,2016-12-15 The blood brain barrier BBB is a complex and dynamic structure that protects the brain from cells within the vasculature from the immune system and from pathogens This barrier is present in arterioles capillaries and venules and is formed at the level of adjacent endothelial cells which are coupled to astrocytes microglia neurons and pericytes The structure of this endothelial barrier is unique among endothelia of other organ systems and is composed of complexes made up of tight gap and adherens junctions In addition it is the responsibility of the surrounding cellular elements to maintain the integrity of the junctional complexes and restrict the entry of substances from the blood into the brain Changes in permeability of the BBB during physiologic and pathophysiologic conditions involve alterations in specific transporters at the level of the endothelium activation of specific cellular second messenger pathways and or the dissolution of the junctional complexes composing the BBB This book focuses on various aspects that account for the formation and maintenance of the BBB and on disease states that compromise this
