Catskill Summers Mel Senator,2000-11-13 Summers in the country had special meaning for people who lived in the city during the 1940s and 1950s Away from the dirt and noise they could sit in a lawn chair and play a game of cards or go for a walk or pick blueberries on a lazy afternoon Then to cap it off they would pay fifty cents and see a real show at a ritzy Catskill mountain hotel While all this was special for them it was even more important that they bring their children out of the city to be part of the rural past they so often dreamed about This is a story about life in a bungalow colony in the Catskill Mountains of the 1940s and 1950s It is the experience that thousands of people from the city shared when going to the country for the summer It represents a delicious moment in time for those families who made it out of the city and into the wonders of the Catskill countryside the 1960s New York had created the great reservoir and aqueduct system in the mountains that now supplies the city with 90 percent of its water The Catskills also served as a critical space in which the nation s ideas about nature evolved Stradling describes the great influence writers and artists had upon urban residents especially the painters of the Hudson River School whose ideal landscapes created expectations about how rural America should appear By the mid 1800s urban residents had turned the Catskills into an important vacation ground and by the late 1800s the Catskills had become one of the premiere resort regions in the nation In the mid twentieth century the older Catskill resort region was in steep decline but the Jewish Borscht Belt in the southern Catskills was thriving The automobile revitalized mountain tourism and residence and increased the threat of suburbanization of the historic landscape Throughout each of these significant incarnations urban and rural residents worked in a rough collaboration though not without conflict to reshape the mountains and American ideas about rural landscapes and nature
